

Nigel Farage Of 'Brexit' in the UK Has Been Hired by Republicans To Split California Into 2 States

US Republicans have recruited political maverick, Nigel Farage and Aaron Banks, both from the UK and the driving force behind 'Brexit', to campaign for splitting California into two states. They recently raised $1 million for a referendum vote in the 2018 midterm elections. The new border would separate the rural eastern part of California, which is more likely to vote Republican, from the west coast, including L.A and San Francisco. Simultaneously, a leftist group is trying to break California away from the United States completely to create a new country. -GEG

Nigel Farage, 'Bad Boys of Brexit' Join #CalExit

There is a new "#CalExit" movement afoot, and it just received a $1 million cash infusion and two potentially explosive partners as the "Bad Boys of 'Brexit'" – Nigel Farage and Aaron Banks.

The movement's leaders have set their sights on splitting the Golden State into two Californias, Eastern and Western.

The UK Daily Mail reports that "Former [U.K. Independence Party] leader Nigel Farage and Leave backer Arron Banks have just returned from the United States, where they helped raise $1million (£800,000) for a 'Calexit' campaign, which would split California into two eastern and western regions."

This move should come as no surprise to anyone whose paying attention to California politics. The State of Jefferson movement has been fighting to secede from California proper since 1941.

#CalExit has largely been a leftist movement—as the “Yes, California” campaign has sought to leave the United States altogether, and form its own country, in the wake of Trump’s election.

Meanwhile, those pushing to form the 51st State of Jefferson – from a collection of 21 rural Northern California counties – express frustration over being “ruled over” by the two heavily populated urban centers of political power, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

This new move by the architects of Brexit to split California into two separate states, along the lines of Virginia and West Virginia is likely to draw support from those who have been fighting to do exactly that for decades. The map of “#CalExit2” Movement would look like this:

- Western California along the coastline from the Los Angeles / Orange County (LA/OC) line all the way to the Oregon border, largely hugging the coastline and including the major urban centers of political power, Los Angeles and San Francisco, as well as the northern coastal counties of Mendocino, Humbolt, Trinity and Del Norte
- Eastern California would comprise the rest of the current state of California, including all the eastern counties of the state, and also the coastline from the LA/OC line to the Mexican border.

Where the #CalExit2 map differs markedly from the State of Jefferson's proposal is the ceding of the northern coastal counties noted above to Western California – and the inclusion of the entire eastern part of the state and Orange and San Diego counties all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

Read Full Article Here...

EU Commission President Supports States' Secession from the US Because of Trump's Support for 'Brexit'

Paul Juncker, the EU Commission president, said he would push for Ohio and Texas to split from the rest of America if Donald Trump continues to encourage European countries to break from the EU, like the UK is doing under the banner of Brexit. -GEG

EU could BREAK UP the US: Juncker in jaw-dropping threat to Trump over support for Brexit

EUROPEAN Union boss Jean-Claude Juncker this afternoon issued a jaw-dropping threat to the United States, saying he could campaign to break up the country in revenge for Donald Trump's supportive comments about Brexit.

n an extraordinary speech the EU Commission president said he would push for Ohio and Texas to split from the rest of America if the Republican president does not change his tune and become more supportive of the EU.

The remarks are diplomatic dynamite at a time when relations between Washington and Brussels are already strained over Europe's meagre contributions to NATO and the US leader's open preference for dealing with national governments.

They are by far the most outspoken intervention any senior EU figure has made about Mr Trump and are likely to dismay some European leaders who were hoping to seek a policy of rapprochement with their most important ally. Speaking at the centre-right European People Party's (EPP) annual conference in Malta this afternoon, the EU Commission boss did not hold back in his disdain for the White House chief's eurosceptic views.

Read Full Article Here...

Department Of Education Is Funding Lessons In Islam In

Public Schools

Martin Mawyer, president of the Christian Action Network said that the US Department of Education is funding lesson plans distributed by PBS (the Public Broadcasting System) on behalf of the Islamic faith. Teachers are encouraged to quiz students on what Muslim prayers sound like and what prayer movements look like. Meanwhile, Christianity is prohibited from government schools. -GEG

Republicans Under Criticism For Pushing A Bill To Allow Internet Providers To Sell Your Browsing History

Republicans in the House and the Senate voted nearly unanimously to pass a bill that will allow ISP providers such as Comcast, AT&T, Time Warner, and Verizon to sell your browsing history and other personal data that may include your Social Security number, passwords, and health information. You can protect your privacy by subscribing to a virtual private network (VPN) that encrypts your browsing history. A free program called TOR can disguise your web traffic by mixing it with everyone else's and adding "Internet Noise" that will render your web history meaningless by constantly conducting random Google searches. -GEG

Republicans Are About To Sell Your Browser History. Here's How To Protect Yourself.

Comcast has done the impossible. Somehow, Americans are about to hate it (and just about every other large internet service provider in the country) more than they already do.

Thanks in no small part to the efforts of those ISPs, the House of Representatives passed a bill Tuesday that would allow internet and telecom companies to share customers' personal information, including web browsing history, without their consent.

Rep. Marsha Blackburn (R-Tenn.), who introduced the legislation in the House, has received \$693,000 from the internet and telecom industry over the course of her 14-year political career, including $77,000 from Comcast, $98,600 from Verizon, and $104,000 from AT&T. While we're on the subject, here's a complete list of every politician who voted for Tuesday's bill, and how much the telecom industry gave them in their most recent election cycle. Yeah.

Unfortunately, you can't just go and drop your ISP for one that will protect your data, since many of them are local monopolies and you don't have a choice.

"ISPs are in a position to see a lot of what you do online. They kind of have to be, since they have to carry all of your traffic," Jeremy Guillula, a senior staff technologist at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a nonprofit that advocates for internet privacy, said in a statement to The Huffington Post.

That's different than the rest of the internet, where "if I don't like the practices of Google, I can go to Bing; if I don't like the practices of Bing, I can go to Firefox," former Federal Communications Commission Chairman Tom Wheeler told

HuffPost on Monday. “But if I don’t like the practice of my network provider, I’m out of luck.”

The bill has now passed in both the House and the Senate, with Republicans almost unanimously in favor and Democrats mostly opposed. President Donald Trump has said he strongly supports the measure, meaning a veto is unlikely.

So, in the very likely event that this becomes law, here’s what you can do to protect your privacy:

Get A Virtual Private Network

A virtual private network guards your web traffic by encrypting it as it flows from your device, through your ISP, and to a private server, which then directs you to your ultimate internet destination. They’re extremely common in the corporate world as a way to shield sensitive data when, say, an employee logs on to the free Wi-Fi at Starbucks to do some work.

Read Full Article Here...

Accidents

Involving

Driverless Cars are Blamed On Humans. Could That Be To Protect Car Makers from Liability?

Uber driverless car in Tempe, AZ was involved in a high-speed crash that is being blamed on another car driven by a human. Experimental 'driverless' cars still have people behind the wheel because they have to override the robot every .8 miles. Every 100 to 200 miles, they have a potential for a $5000 accident or a traffic fatality. (Note: the first 2:20 minutes are advertisements.) -GEG

President Trump Begins To Remove Coal Industry Shackles Placed There By Obama

President Trump signed an executive order directing the EPA to start the legal process of withdrawing and rewriting the Clean Power Plan that limits the permissible emissions of harmless carbon from power plants. This was considered to be the center-piece of Obama's climate policy and the attack by

Anti-Abortion Activists Release New Video On Selling Baby Parts And Are Arrested

California prosecutors charged David Daleiden and Sandra Merritt with 15 felonies for filming without consent after they made undercover videos of themselves trying to buy fetal tissue from Planned Parenthood. The pair had previously been indicted in Texas on similar charges, but the charges were dropped. David Daleiden's Center for Medical Progress recently released a video featuring Dr. DeShawn Taylor, a former Planned Parenthood abortionist, saying she performs elective abortions as late as 24 weeks into a pregnancy. -GEG

A new video released by Center for Medical Progress (CMP) reveals a former Planned Parenthood abortionist allegedly discussing how she performs elective abortions on healthy unborn babies up to 24 weeks of pregnancy, and the situation she encounters if a baby is aborted showing some signs of life.

Dr. DeShawn Taylor was a longtime abortion provider at Planned Parenthood Los Angeles and was previously a medical director at Planned Parenthood of Arizona. Taylor is introduced to the CMP undercover journalists in the video by Dr. Deborah Nucatola, the Planned Parenthood chief medical officer who was heard in the now famous initial CMP video in which she was allegedly heard discussing the sale of aborted baby body parts while eating a salad and drinking wine at lunch.

In the latest CMP video, Taylor is heard explaining to the journalists that Nucatola trained her.

During a reception at a Planned Parenthood conference, Taylor describes to CMP's undercover journalists—posing as buyers from a biomedical company—how she delivers intact fetuses during late-term abortions. In the video, a CMP journalist indicates that intact bodies will allow for the harvesting of organs and body parts that are more valuable for scientific research.

At one point in the footage, the abortionist explains the difficulties abortionists encounter when a baby comes through the procedure with signs of life: “In Arizona, if the fetus comes out with any signs of life, we’re supposed to transport it. To the hospital.”

When asked if there is “any standard procedure for verifying signs of life?” Taylor responds by saying, “The key is, you need to pay attention to who’s in the room, right?”

Taylor chuckles and says, “It’s a mess. It’s a mess.”

Read Full Article Here...