Tom Fitton of Judicial Watch is using law suits to pressure President Trump to get rid of corrupt hangovers from the Obama Administration and those loyal to the Deep State. In this video statement, Fitton reviews the many examples of how Trump's appointees and their agencies have defended and protected those who are guilty of extreme corruption during the Obama Administration, including Hillary Clinton.[The sound is a bit low. but the information is excellent.] -GEG

Video summary by JW Williams:

Tom Fitton of Judicial Watch says that Special Counsel Robert Mueller is setting up his own Justice Department to try to throw Trump in jail. He revealed that Mueller's team raided the home of Paul Manafort, Trump's former campaign manager, with guns drawn. He is harassing Trump's administration for documents related to firing former staff members.

Fitton says that the Mueller investigation is not proper, according to the Constitution, because he can only be fired for cause, he has not been confirmed by the Senate, and he is not under the supervision of someone who is confirmed. Rod Rosenstein appointed Mueller, but now he has been interviewed as a witness in the case.

Mueller interviewed with Trump for the FBI director job, to replace Comey, creating yet another conflict-of-interest.

Comey took unauthorized documents from the FBI and leaked them in order to get a Special Counsel investigation against Trump. Congress, the Department of Justice and the media are silent and seem to be protecting Hillary Clinton. The deep state is also protecting Obama, and they refuse to release FBI investigation reports about his alleged involvement in selling his Senate seat after he was elected president. The State Department refuses to release documents on Benghazi and the IRA refuses to release documents on scrutiny of conservative organizations under Trump.

His appointees are either incompetent, insubordinate or hostile to the idea of transparency and rule of law. The deep state wants Judicial Watch to wait until 2020 to get Hillary's emails. Susan Rice admitted unmasking Trump associates after she originally denied doing it.

Judicial Watch has filed dozens of lawsuits against the Trump administration to get access to information. There is massive obstruction by the deep state on the Russia case. Republican congressmen are allowing Mueller run wild as they don't want the responsibility of investigating the Russia allegations.

Fitton says that the public needs to pressure Trump and let him know that we want him to get rid of his corrupt appointees.

London: Catholic Church Hosts Satanic Fashion Show

St. Andrew's Catholic Church in London allowed Turkish designer, Dilara Findikoglu, to use the sanctuary for a Satanic theme fashion show during London's Fashion Week. The show's models wore outfits resembling vampires and demons. Some had symbols painted on their faces. Violet Chachki, a drag-queen model, was dressed in a red devil outfit, with his hair shaped to look like demonic horns. -GEG

Turkish designer Dilara Findikoglu's presented her Spring/Summer 2018 collection at London Fashion Week and it was nothing less than a satanic Black Mass. Indeed, the event took place at the altar of St Andrew Church in London and incorporated heavy occult and satanic symbolism. In short, the event summed up everything the fashion world is truly about.

While Dilara Findikoglu is said to an "up-and-coming rebel of the fashion world", she's perfectly in line with the industry's philosophy. She's not rebelling at all, she's doing what exactly the type of stuff "they" want her to do.

For this reason, celebrities such as Rihanna, FKA Twigs, and Grimes wear seen wearing Findikoglu's creations.

Her latest fashion show featured artist Brooke Candy (her videos are full of MK imagery) and drag artist Violet Chachki.

The backdrop is basically a mish-mash of Masonic-inspired imagery. On each side are the Masonic twin pillars. Between the pillars is the letter G inside an inverted pentagram. Underneath it is the all-seeing eye inside a hexagram. There is also the Masonic square and compass in there. To top it off, the runway was a checkerboard pattern. Here's a classic Masonic painting for comparison.

Venezuela: Female Teachers and Doctors Turn to Prostitution to Survive

As Venezuela's food shortage continues to worsen, some women are leaving the country and turning to the sex trade in neighboring Colombia to survive and to send food home to their children. Economic migrants who can afford the passage have gone to places like Miami, Santiago, and Panama while the less fortunate, and estimated 350,000 refugees, have escaped to Colombia. -GEG

ARAUCA, Colombia

At a squat, concrete brothel on the muddy banks of the Arauca River, Gabriel Sánchez rattled off the previous jobs of the women who now sell their bodies at his establishment for $25 an hour.

“We’ve got lots of teachers, some doctors, many professional women and one petroleum engineer,” he yelled over the din of vallenato music. “All of them showed up with their degrees in hand.”

And all of them came from Venezuela.

As Venezuela’s economy continues to collapse amid food shortages, hyperinflation and U.S. sanctions, waves of economic refugees have fled the country. Those with the means have gone to places like Miami, Santiago and Panama.

The less fortunate find themselves walking across the border into Colombia looking for a way, any way, to keep themselves and their families fed. A recent study suggested as many as 350,000 Venezuelans had entered Colombia in the last six years.

But with jobs scarce, many young – and not so young – women are turning to the world’s oldest profession to make ends meet.

Dayana, a 30-year-old mother of four, nursed a beer as she watched potential clients walk down the dirt road that runs in front of wooden shacks, bars and bordellos. Dressed for work in brightly colored spandex, Dayana said she used to be the manager of a food-processing plant on the outskirts of Caracas.

But that job disappeared after the government seized the factory and “looted it,” she said.

Seven months ago, struggling to put food on the table, she came to Colombia looking for work. Without an employment permit, she found herself working as a prostitute in the capital, Bogotá. While the money was better there, she eventually moved to Arauca, a cattle town of 260,000 people along the border with Venezuela, because it was easier to send food back to her children in Caracas.

The previous night, her sister had traveled by bus for 18 hours from Caracas to pick up a bundle of groceries that Dayana had purchased – pasta, tuna, rice, cooking oil – and then immediately jumped on a bus back home.

“If you had told me four years ago that I would be here, doing this, I wouldn’t have believed you,” said Dayana, who asked that her last name not be used. “But we’ve gone from crisis to crisis to crisis, and now look where we are.”

Grassroots Candidate Roy Moore Won the Republican Primary over Opponent with $30 Million

Roy Moore, the former chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court, won the Republican primary election against Luther Strange, who was appointed to Jeff Sessions’ Senate seat last year. Moore is supported by a populist base and spent $1.5 million on his campaign. Luther Strange is an establishment Republican who benefited from support from Mitch McConnell and a $30-million campaign fund, but he still lost. Moore will run against Democrat, Doug Jones, in the special election to fill the US Senate seat in December. -GEG

A firebrand Alabama jurist wrested a U.S. Senate nomination from an appointed incumbent backed by millions of dollars from national Republicans, adding a new chapter Tuesday to an era of outsider politics that ushered Donald Trump into the White House yet leaves his presidency and his party in disarray.

Roy Moore's 9-point victory over Sen. Luther Strange, backed by the White House and Republican leaders on Capitol Hill, ranks as a miscalculation and temporary embarrassment for the president; it's a more consequential rebuke for Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, who Moore said should step aside as GOP floor chief.

The Kentucky Republican already is struggling to capitalize on his narrow 52-48 majority. He failed this week to deliver a long-promised health care overhaul, with equally perilous fights looming on taxes, the budget, immigration and the nation's credit limit. Now, McConnell may also face a 2018 midterm election cycle complicated by GOP primary challengers who, like Moore, make the Senate leader an albatross for establishment candidates, including incumbents Dean Heller of Nevada and Jeff Flake of Arizona.

Moore, the famed "Ten Commandments judge" twice removed from elected judicial office for defying federal courts, declared his nomination a message to Washington leaders "that their wall has been cracked and will now fall," though he excepted the president from his ire. "Together we can make America great," he said, echoing Trump's campaign slogan.

In Mississippi, state lawmaker Chris McDaniel, who nearly defeated Sen. Thad Cochran in 2014, called Moore's win an "incredibly inspiring" blueprint that leaves him on the cusp of challenging Sen. Roger Wicker in 2018. "We know Mitch McConnell was rejected tonight – and Roger Wicker is just another part of Mitch McConnell's leadership apparatus," McDaniel told The Associated Press, saying he expects conservative challengers to emerge in other states, as well.

Trump and McConnell quickly closed ranks behind Moore after Strange conceded, underscoring their desire to keep the seat in Republican hands. Trump tweeted congratulations to Moore after the win. "Luther Strange started way back & ran a good race. Roy, WIN in Dec!" he said

Three tweets supporting Strange on Monday and Tuesday disappeared from Trump's Twitter account. The White House didn't immediately respond with an explanation. On Wednesday morning Trump sent a tweet praising Moore.

"Spoke to Roy Moore of Alabama last night for the first time. Sounds like a really great guy who ran a fantastic race," said Trump's tweet.

The Senate Leadership Fund, a McConnell-aligned political action committee, also pledged to support Moore after spending $9 million on Strange's behalf.

A West Point graduate and Vietnam veteran, Moore now is the favorite over Democrat Doug Jones in a Dec. 12 special election, though Republicans quietly worry the sometimes controversial Moore could yield an uncomfortably close race to fill the seat previously held by Attorney General Jeff Sessions.

Trump, meanwhile, must reconcile being the president who promised to "drain the swamp" yet endorsed and campaigned alongside Strange, 64, a lobbyist-turned-politician, in lieu of Moore, a 70-year-old figure steeped in anti-establishment fervor. Adding intrigue was the fact that Strange got his Senate post by being promoted from his job as Alabama attorney general by a now-convicted former governor whom Strange's office had been investigating for corruption.

Trump's choice left him opposite from his campaign architect and departed White House adviser Steve Bannon, who campaigned for Moore and introduced the nominee to his supporters Tuesday night as revelers watched returns showing Moore victorious in 63 of Alabama's 67 counties.
