

UK Raids the Home of Journalist's Home After He Tweeted about Muslim Violence

Journalist, Peter Sweden, was the target of the Hate Crimes Unit of the UK police when they raided his parents' house. However, he is living in Norway now because he is afraid of being imprisoned in Sweden or the UK for reporting on Muslim crime. The UK raid came after he tweeted, "Palestinian man convicted of raping 14-year-old Swedish girl – Blames the court translator." -GEG

Big Brother Is Watching You.

UK hate crime police were sent to a blogger's home address to arrest him for thought crimes.

Peter Imanuelson is a Swedish photographer, a YouTuber, and an online journalist reporting on news from inside Sweden.

Peter often tweets on Muslim and immigrant violence in Sweden.

Palestinian man convicted of raping 14 year old Swedish girl – Blames the court translator. <https://t.co/dk9XzhX5z7pic.twitter.com/m3mXy6P0pz>

– PeterSweden (@PeterSweden7) October 20, 2017

The truth upsets elites in Sweden.

On Wednesday British police went to Peter's family's home in Great Britain looking for Peter.

The hate crime police were sent to the home to arrest Peter for tweeting on Muslim violence.

This is happening now in the West.

Read full article here..

UK Police Arrested More than 3,395 People for Online ‘Hate Crimes’ Driven by ‘Hostility’

Official UK police guidelines require that a hate crime must be driven by ‘hostility’, but police are unable to clearly define what hostility means. The Crown Prosecution Service advises officers to look for ‘unfriendliness’ as a sign of a hate crime. Cheshire Police have warned users of social media not to post “offensive” comments or they could face two years in prison. Glasgow police demand that people be “kind” online. Authorities are encouraging an increase in hate-crime reporting. With guidelines like these, the reports will come in, and perfectly normal people will become ensnared – especially those who are angry about fraud and corruption in government. -GEG

Official guidelines insist a hate crime must be driven by “hostility”, but when contacted, many UK forces are unable to give a definition of what they mean by “hostility” in the context of hate crimes.

Breitbart London contacted dozens of forces to ask for their working definition of “hostility” and was referred on to the “dictionary definition” which includes “unfriendliness” and “dislike”.

Others referred Breitbart London to national bodies, including the College of Policing (CoP) and the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), which both admit there is an “absence of a precise legal definition of hostility”, with the latter also referring individual forces onto “dictionary definitions” for the purpose of investigating hate crimes.

UK police say hostility under hate crime legislation can include “unfriendliness”.

Well lock me the hell up, then. pic.twitter.com/Wme0ddX0a0

– Raheem 🇵🇰 (@RaheemKassam) October 16, 2017

Dictionary definitions include a wide range of normal human behaviours and emotions, and images on social media suggest police officers are being told to look out for “unfriendliness” as a sign of a hate crime.

The CPS also mentions “ill-will, ill-feeling, spite, contempt, prejudice, unfriendliness, antagonism, resentment, and dislike” as examples of hostility that could be taken from a dictionary.

Many of these emotions are subjective, raising concerns police could target people inconsistently and unfairly, or due to misunderstandings and miscommunications. Others have pointed out “dislike” of immoral things is often honourable.

“Leicestershire Police refers to the College of Policing’s hate crime operational guidance. We refer to a standard English dictionary,” one force told Breitbart London.

Cheshire Police and Dorset Police forces told Breitbart London they follow “national guidance”, including the CPS, with the latter force insisting they “ensure officers and staff understand and are able to identify hate crime”.

Cheshire Police has previously warned users of social media not to post “offensive” comments or you “could face a large fine or up to two years in prison” and the Glasgow force has demanded people be “kind” online.

North Yorkshire Police simply sent Breitbart London the Citizen’s Advice and Home Office definition of a hate crime, as “any criminal offence which is perceived by the victim or any other person, to be motivated by a hostility or prejudice”.

Read full article here...

Las Vegas Shooter’s Brother

Arrested on Child Porn Charges

Bruce Paddock, the younger brother of the Las Vegas shooter, Stephan, was arrested in Hollywood on 20 counts of possession of child pornography and sexual exploitation of a child. He also threatened to kill his friend, Hector Cruz, the owner of the Sun Valley auto shop. After threatening to burn down the shop, employees ran him off and obtained a restraining order. Bruce was reported by Cruz to be a drug addict and dealer in methamphetamine and marijuana. Eric Paddock, another brother who gave interviews to the media from his home in Florida, is not implicated in this matter. -GEG

Bruce Douglas Paddock, brother of Las Vegas mass shooter Stephen Paddock, was arrested in North Hollywood on Wednesday on 20 counts of possession of child pornography and sexual exploitation of a child.

The 59-year-old was arrested at a nursing home, where he was found after police discovered more than 600 images of child pornography which had been in his possession, according to the Los Angeles Times. The images were found after he was evicted from a Sun Valley auto shop where he had previously been squatting.

Paddock was booked and is being held at the Los Angeles Police Department's Metropolitan Detention Center, with bail set at $60,000.

LAPD released a photo of Paddock on Wednesday "in case there may be victims of unreported incidents and they are asking for the public's assistance in locating them."

Bruce Douglas Paddock

Hector Cruz, the owner of the Sun Valley auto shop, told KTLA that Paddock, a longtime friend, holed up in the shop's attic after asking Cruz to fix his car. After Paddock threatened to burn down the building, employees ran him off and obtained a restraining order, fearing that he would return. "He told me he was going to kill me," Cruz told the station.

Read full article here...

Lawsuit Filed Against Hillary Clinton for Failure to Disclose Funding of Dossier Used to Smear Trump

The Campaign Legal Center filed a lawsuit with the Federal Election Commission alleging the Democratic National Committee and Hillary Clinton's 2016 campaign committee violated campaign finance law by failing to report that they paid for the dossier against Trump. Hiding these payments from the public record is a violation of federal law. -GEG

The Washington Post published a bombshell on the discredited Trump dossier on Tuesday.

As Kristinn Taylor reported earlier on The Gateway Pundit the WaPo article claims the 2016 presidential campaign of Democratic Party nominee Hillary Clinton and the Democratic National Committee paid for the Fusion GPS dossier alleging Russian ties with the presidential campaign of Republican Donald Trump and sordid phony personal smears of Trump. The Post reported that Clinton campaign and DNC lawyer Marc Elias and his law firm Perkins Coie paid Fusion GPS to continue researching Trump after a Republican donor who originally funded the research pulled out in April 2016.

Via The Campaign Legal Center:

Today, Campaign Legal Center (CLC) filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) alleging the Democratic National Committee (DNC) and Hillary Clinton's 2016 campaign committee violated campaign finance law. They failed to accurately disclose the purpose and recipient of payments for the dossier of research alleging connections between then-candidate Donald Trump and Russia, effectively hiding these payments from public scrutiny, contrary to the requirements of federal law.

Adav Noti, senior director, trial litigation and strategy at CLC, who previously served as the FEC's Associate General Counsel for Policy said:

"By filing misleading reports, the DNC and Clinton campaign undermined the vital public information role of campaign disclosures. Voters need campaign disclosure laws to be enforced so they can hold candidates accountable for how they raise and spend money. The FEC must investigate this apparent violation and take appropriate action."

Brendan Fischer, director, federal and FEC reform at CLC said:

"Questions about who paid for this dossier are the subject of intense public interest, and this is precisely the information that FEC reports are supposed to provide. Payments by a campaign or party committee to an opposition research firm are legal, as long as those payments are accurately disclosed. But describing payments for opposition research as 'legal services' is entirely misleading and subverts the reporting requirements."

Read full article here...

Republicans Collaborated with Hillary and the DNC to Smear Trump During Election Campaign

Roger Stone, Trump's former campaign manager, says that Fusion GPS, the company that authored the dossier that alleged Trump hired prostitutes in Moscow, was funded by Hillary Clinton and the Democratic National Committee to smear Trump. They spent $9 million to compile the dossier that was constructed by a former British spy, Christopher Steele. Both the Post and the NY Times claimed that the origin of the document began during the Republican presidential primaries, and was funded by Paul Singer, a prominent Republican hedge fund manager. His agent, Dan Senor, made sure that the document was given to Senator John McCain to deliver to the FBI. The FBI paid Christopher Steele $50,000 to update the dossier. -GEG

45% of People Living in California Do Not Speak English in Their Homes

Steven Camarota of the Center for Immigration Studies says that, because immigration has been so high in the US for so many years, an estimated 66 million people across America do not speak English in their homes. The huge number of immigrants has overwhelmed the assimilation process. -GEG