

Trump Negotiating $80 Billion Deal for Saudi Arabia to Acquire Nuclear Power

President Trump is considering a deal with Saudi Arabia allowing Westinghouse Electric, a financially strapped nuclear energy company, to build 16 nuke plants over the next 20 years, at a cost of more than $80 billion. The deal would also permit Saudi Arabia to enrich and reprocess uranium, which can be used for nuclear weapons. Congress must approve any agreement that is forged, and lawmakers will have three months to weigh in on the deal. [What in the world is Trump thinking?]

The Trump administration is considering forging a deal with Saudi Arabia allowing a financially strapped nuclear energy company to build plants in the Middle Eastern country.

Energy Department Chief Rick Perry will travel to London Friday to discuss with Saudi Arabian officials the prospect of building reactors in the kingdom, according to Tuesday Bloomberg report. The deal would also permit Saudi Arabia to enrich and reprocess uranium.

Some U.S. agreements prohibit the enrichment and reprocessing of uranium in exchange for the use of nuclear technology. Similar prohibitions scuttled nuclear deals during former President Barack Obama's administration.

That was then; This is now. President Donald Trump's administration, which has committed itself to protecting the coal and nuclear energy industries, wants to loosen those rules to help Westinghouse Electric and other companies win Saudi contracts.

Saudi officials plan to construct 16 nuclear power reactors over the next 20 years at a cost of more than $80 billion, according to the World Nuclear Association, a group that analyzes nuclear energy trade.

University of Texas at Austin Antifa Group Recruiting Mentally Ill People to Battle Capitalism

Far-Left Watch says that The Revolutionary Student Front at the University of Texas in Austin is actively recruiting students with 'mental illnesses.' The group published a book, Turn Illness into a Weapon, that blames mental illness on capitalism. The Antifa group aims to treat mental illness by fighting capitalism. Ergo, they recruit mentally ill people, and have admitted that some of their leaders are mentally ill.

A Texas Antifa student group hosted a six month health program to “politicize” students with “mental illnesses,” according to a Thursday report.

The Revolutionary Student Front at the University of Texas at Austin hosted a “Revolutionary Mental Health Program” “to address the mental health needs of students in a way that would primarily serve to politicize and strengthen them, to become more committed to revolution and more capable of carrying it out,” reported Far Left Watch.

The UT Austin Antifa student group based its 2017 program on “Turn Illness Into A Weapon,” a book charting the neo-Marxist Socialist Patients Collective group’s actions in Germany, which placed the blame of mental illness on capitalist oppression.

The Revolutionary Student Front sought to create a health care system that not only treated students for their mental illnesses, but also mobilized them to fight capitalism.

“The primary method of combating the symptoms of mental illness that we face under capitalism must be organizing those suffering to come into violent class conflict with the system that creates their illness,” said the group in its 13,000-word manifesto.

Parkland Teacher Confirms a Shooting Drill Was Planned on Day of the Event

Ernest Rospierski, a history teacher from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School, told the Associated Press he thought the shooting event was a drill at first because he was warned earlier that day that a code red drill would be taking place and he believed they would be shooting blanks. He said that the shooter was wearing a mask.

Another teacher comes forward, says, a 'Code Red drill' went live. Did police accidentally load live ammo into the active shooter's magazines instead of blanks? Who was the real shooter? Where is the video footage?

PARKLAND, Fla. (INTELLIHUB) – Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School history teacher Ernest Rospierski told the Associated Press he thought the Valentine's Day massacre was a drill at first and was warned earlier that day that a code red drill would be taking place in which blanks were to be used.

The brave teacher who saved a number of his students lives on 14 February, told the AP that his students and he were at the doorway in the west stairwell of the 1200 building and were all on their way out of the building when they heard gunfire. The teacher and his pupils were trying to exit the building after the fire bell rang just seconds earlier when they became engulfed in a real-time nightmare.

"I assumed that it was a code red drill because they had told us earlier in the day that they were going to be having a code red drill," the teacher explained. "I assumed it was blanks."

That's when Rospierski acted quickly to get as many students as he could to go back into the rooms while the shooter continued his rampage at the east end of the hallway.

“I heard two shots,” he said. “Those two shots would have been my friend Scott Beigel who had been shot and killed trying to save his kids.”

Parkland Student Says They Were Warned about a Realistic Drill with Blank Gunshots

Thomas Holgate, a Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School student, said that he heard thuds, but thought that they were blanks. He thought it was a drill because for a year and a half the students were told that there was going to be a school shooter “drill” that was set to be as real as possible, shooting blanks, with a SWAT team and helicopters.

WINTRICH REPORT EXCLUSIVE: Interview With Stoneman Douglas Shooting Survivor Thomas Holgate <https://t.co/M19vyIJXga>

– Lucian B. Wintrich (@lucianwintrich) February 27, 2018

In an explosive interview with Parkland shooting survivor Thomas Holgate, a number of inconsistencies set forth by the MSM, and circumstances surrounding the shooting and the school itself were discussed, shedding further light on yet another confusing story that seems to take another twist with each passing day. Earlier today, we reported that emergency responders were told to wait outside while the children were bleeding out in the school. Soon after, Fox News' Laura Ingraham revealed sources told her the Sheriff's Dept instructed the Broward Deputies NOT to enter the school unless their body cameras were on.

During the interview, Holgate noted that the shooter was only in the school for approximately nine minutes, and during that time period he killed 17 people, in the chaos, and due to outdated security cameras with 20-minute delays, people were shuffling in and out of locations unaware of the shooter's location.

That day, the students had already undergone a fire drill, to their shock another drill seemed to be underway.

Once Holgate was crowded into the auditorium with other students, he began to hear small thuds outside of the door, which he compared to the sound of "textbooks dropping". The story then takes a dramatic turn for bizarre when Holgate states that the students thought the thuds were "blanks". This was because for a year and a half these students was going to be a school shooter "drill" that was set to be as real as possible.

"We were told that when the drill happens, the SWAT team is gonna be there, there's gonna be helicopters, there will be police, there will be blanks shots, so we were like, 'Okay, this is just a drill.'"

"We were told there was going to be a drill that would make it as real as possible . . . They prepared us for something that might happen at the school. It's sick to think they'd even make us prepare for something like that.”

Florida: Deputies Were Told to Wait Outside During Shooting Unless Their Cameras Were 'On'

YOURCOMMENTSHERE

BREAKING: Ingraham=> Sheriff's Dept Told Broward Deputies NOT to Enter School Unless Their Body Cameras Were On (VIDEO)

Seventeen children and adults were slaughtered in a mass shooting by Nikolas Cruz in a February 14th attack in Parkland, Florida.

Three Broward County Sheriff's deputies arrived at the scene but were standing outside the school.

On Monday night, Fox News' Laura Ingraham revealed sources told her the Sheriff's Dept instructed the Broward Deputies NOT to enter the school unless their body cameras were on. WOW.

Even worse, the police lost radio communications during the Parkland shooting.

"Sources are telling us that the deputies who arrived at the scene of the shooting were told not to enter the school unless their body cameras were turned on. Then we found out that the deputies did not have body cameras so they did not enter the building or engage the shooter," Ingraham said.

Laura Ingraham also said the Police also lost radio communications during the Parkland shooting!

Ingraham also said the source confirmed police lost radio communications during the Ft. Lauderdale Airport shooting (terrorist attack) in 2017.

Christian Church Leaders Close Church at Jesus' Burial

Site Over Israeli Taxation

Jerusalem: Christian leaders closed the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, built where it is believed that Jesus was buried. The closing was in protest over new taxes by the Israeli government. The municipal government of Jerusalem issued an order for the seizure of church assets, including property and bank accounts, for new taxes in the amount of $186 million, that they say are owed to the government. Church officials say this is an attempt to weaken the presence of Christians in Jerusalem. -GEG

Leaders of the two largest Christian denominations in Jerusalem on Monday said the Church of the Holy Sepulchre will remain closed indefinitely to protest an Israeli attempt to tax their properties in the holy city, shuttering one of Jerusalem's most venerable and popular holy sites.

Both Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholic representatives said they were blindsided by the Jerusalem municipality's recent decision to begin taxing them and accused the mayor, Nir Barkat, of disrupting a longstanding and fragile status quo.

Anna Koulouris, an official in the chief secretariat's office of the Greek Patriarchate, said that all major Christian denominations were united in their opposition to the Israeli move.

"They are serious," she said. "They really want to see something change before they think about reopening the doors."

The church, situated in Jerusalem's Old City, is one of Christianity's holiest sites, revered as the spot where Jesus was crucified and resurrected. It is a popular destination for tourists and Christian pilgrims from around the world.

Barkat has said the order does not affect houses of worship, including the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and only applies to what he calls “commercial properties” owned by the churches, including hotels and office space. He said the churches have debts of roughly $185 million.

“We will no longer require Jerusalem’s residents to bear or subsidize this huge debt,” he said in a statement. He claimed Jerusalem has a “good and respectful relationship” with all churches in the city.

But church representatives said Barkat’s hasty move threatened that relationship and that the sudden taxes would jeopardize schools, health clinics and other vital services for their local flocks.

Both Koulouris and Farid Jubran, a legal adviser to the Roman Catholic Church’s custodian of holy sites, said the churches were never formally notified of Barkat’s decision and learned of it through the media.

Both officials said they do not know how the city even calculated their debts or decided which buildings to tax.

“We’re talking about land with spiritual significance to people,” Koulouris said. “Where do you draw the line?”

Jubran said it was especially shocking because the church has good ties with the mayor, and that at a meeting weeks before the order was issued, he made no mention of it. He said tax inspectors later arrived at a monastery and tried to seize property to collect debts until a lawyer stopped them.

“It absolutely took us by surprise,” he said. “We wake up one morning and find the municipality took unilateral action without previous notice.”

Broward Sheriff Reported Bodies Still in School Building Day After Shooting

According to the Miami Herald dated Thursday, February 15, the day after the school shooting, Sheriff Scott Israel reported that some of the victims' bodies were still in the school's facilities. He said, "Right now the focus of the FBI and the Broward Sheriff's Office is on the successful prosecution of this killer and we are not going to leave any stone unturned."

The bodies of some victims of Wednesday's shooting at a Broward high school still remain inside the school's facilities, Broward County Sheriff Scott Israel said Thursday.

"There are some bodies that are still in the school," Israel said at a press conference held near Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland. "It is a process."

The case is being investigated by the FBI, the state police (FDLE) and Broward officers.

"Right now the focus of the FBI and the Broward Sheriff's Office is on the successful prosecution of this killer and we are not going to leave any stone unturned," Israel said. "We are trying to process this as quickly as we can."

Medical Personnel Were Told to 'Stand Down' at the Florida Shooting Event

Florida: Reporter, Brian Entin of WSVN local news, published comments from a medical first-responder who did not want to be identified for fear of reprisal. The medic was at the scene of the school shooting and said he was told to 'stand down.' He told the reporter that medical personnel were not allowed inside the building until law enforcement was finished clearing the building. He said that he believed he could have saved lives if they had been able to treat victims earlier. - GEG

A first responder to the Parkland school shooting claims he was told to stand down and not enter the building to recover victims, which he believes would have saved lives.

Speaking to a WSVN Miami News 7 reporter, an emergency medical responder who was one of the first at the scene, said law enforcement did not follow mass casualty event protocols.

Reporter Brian Entin published comments from the responder – who did not want to be identified for fear of reprisal – on Twitter Saturday.

“Everything I was trained on mass casualty events says they did the wrong thing. You don’t wait for the scene to be cleared. You go in immediately armed. Retrieve the victims. You can’t leave the victims laying there.”

“We were asking to go in. Asking the scene commander to go in. Why are we all standing around? Why are we not having patients to treat? Why are we not going into the building and retrieving these kids? The response every time was law enforcement did not clear the scene and would not allow medical personnel in.”

“I would hypothesize I could have saved lives. I can’t say for sure.”

“I would have risked my life to go in. I was eager to.”

“I was frustrated the entire time I was there.”

“Rapid evacuation of the wounded. All they had to do was drag them out of the building. And we could have started medical care.”

“I think they made the decision they thought was right at the time. But I don’t think it was the right one. They should have been more aggressive about getting the victims out.”

“Can’t say for sure if the people were dead inside or if they could have helped.”

According to CNN, four sheriff’s deputies posted up outside the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School did not enter the building as the shooting was taking place.

Youtube and Facebook Are Purging Truthers, Using “Conspiracy Theories” as the Excuse

Youtuber, Paul Romano, documents the purging of truth-community videos from YouTube. He says that many alternative media creators have been kicked off of Facebook, because the controllers want to prevent people from questioning mainstream propaganda. Google is adjusting its search engine to make sure that certain words, like the name of a non-conforming web site or commentator, are difficult to find or show only negative comments when a search is made. Romano concludes that this is a sign that a major contrived event is planned, and the controllers do not want any coverage on the Internet that questions the official narrative. Italy: 2018 Elections Will Shape the Future of the EU and Mass Immigration

A new poll suggests that Italy would vote to leave the EU if given a referendum vote. The country is $2.7-trillion in debt and struggles with high unemployment and low growth. Its tottering banks hold $220-billion in bad loans. Italy has a population of nearly 61 million people and, since 2014, has absorbed more than 600,000 migrants, many from hostile cultures. This has led to a rise in right-wing politics and promises to end the EU's migration policies and to deport migrants. Violent crime has been a hallmark of the forced immigration policy, which hit a tipping point when 18-year old Pamela Mastropietro was killed by Nigerian migrants and may have been cannibalized. In response, Luca Traini went on a shooting spree randomly targeting black people, and he is being lauded as a hero. The stage is set for violent change and possibly martial law, which is the globalist endgame. -GEG

Police Called Because Student Said That A Math Symbol Looked Like a Gun

Louisiana: Police were called to Oberlin High School last week after a student suggested that a “math symbol looked like a gun.” The comment fueled concern that the student was making a terrorist threat. Police searched the student’s home, and there were no guns found. -GEG

Police were called to Louisiana’s Oberlin High School on February 20 after a student suggested that a “math symbol looked like a gun.”

The incident occurred approximately one week after 17 people were shot and killed at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida.

The Sacramento Bee reported that the symbol was widely discussed and one student’s comments that the square root symbol “looked like a gun” fueled speculation of a “terroristic threat.”

Police went to the student’s home and searched it but found “no guns or any evidence that he had any access to guns.” Moreover, the Bee indicated they found “no evidence the student had any intent to commit harm.”

New York: DACA Illegal Alien Threatens to Shoot Up High School

The Rochester Police Department arrested Abigail Hernandez, a 21-year-old DACA illegal alien, for threatening to shoot up a school in upstate New York, using a fake social media account. Hernandez wrote on the East High School Facebook page: "I'm coming tomorrow morning and I'm going to shoot all of ya bitches." A shot gun was found at her home. Only 4% of DACA illegal aliens have completed a college education. 25% are functionally illiterate in the English language. -GEG

An illegal alien shielded from deportation by the President Obama-created Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program was arrested after allegedly threatening a school shooting in upstate New York.

On Friday, Rochester Deputy Mayor Dr. Cedric Alexander and Deputy Chief La'Ron Singletary announced that 21-year-old DACA illegal alien Abigail Hernandez had been arrested by the Rochester Police Department after allegedly threatening East High School with a school shooting, according to 13WHAM.

"I'm coming tomorrow morning and I'm going to shoot all of ya bitches," Hernandez allegedly wrote on the East High School Facebook page, using a fake social media account.

Hernandez, according to Singletary, was arrested days after she made the threat because it took time for police to find out that she was allegedly running the fake social media account.

As Rochester police arrested the DACA illegal alien at her home for the threat, they obtained a shotgun, but it remains unclear to whom the firearm belongs.
