

Middle Class Squeezed Out as California Economy Falls

written by GEG | May 15, 2018

Victor Davis Hanson, Senior Fellow at the Hoover institution, explains why California is failing. He says that the economic distribution is Medieval, because wealthy people on the coast, who make policy decisions, are not subject to the ramifications of their own ideologies, laws, and regulations that are imposed on the rest of the population. Because of this, an estimated four to five-million people from the middle class have left the state, replaced by illegal aliens from Mexico. [This cannot end well.]-GEG