

Tommy Robinson Still in Prison while Muslim Activist who Beat Policeman at Rally Is Set Free

written by GEG | June 18, 2018

London: A Muslim activist, Omar Mohamad, was set free by a judge, despite striking a police officer in the face with his walking stick while protesting a rally demanding the release of activist Tommy Robinson, who is known for exposing Muslim rape grooming gangs. Justice is skewed, as the violent Muslim man was set free while Tommy has been sentenced to two 13-month terms to be served consecutively for non-violent contempt of court convictions, imposed for reporting on grooming gang trials.

A Muslim activist who beat a police officer with a stick while protesting a Tommy Robinson rally has walked free from court.

Omar Mohamad had chosen to travel all the way from Reading to protest a free speech event led by Robinson at Speaker's Corner in Hyde Park, held "to express views that were adverse to the Muslim community in the United Kingdom" – according to District Judge Richard Blake.

"We live in a democracy – people should feel free, within limits, to express their opinions," he opined.

"You were with a group of other men. It is fair to say that immediately in front of you there was a fracas.

"You joined into the melee that happened and you joined in with your stick.

"While you do need that stick to walk with, you very much used it by wielding it around as a weapon. You brought the stick round and struck [Police Sergeant Guy Rooney] in the face.

“There is no doubt that this was a very significant injury that you caused with your stick.”

Sergeant Rooney had told the court how the attack had left his face so badly damaged that his children would not walk to school with him, and claimed he had been left with post-traumatic stress.

Nevertheless, despite the violent nature of Mohamad’s attack and his decision to claim he was acting in self-defence and plead not guilty, the judge appeared to buy the picture painted by the defence of a sickly man with multiple illnesses, who had “shown genuine remorse”.

Read full article here...