

Someone in the House of Representatives Doxxed Senators Lindsey Graham, Mike Lee, and Orrin Hatch

Republican Senators Lindsey Graham, Mike Lee, and Orrin Hatch were “doxxed”, which means their personal information was publicly posted on the internet after they questioned Christine Blasey Ford. Their personal information, including home addresses and private phone numbers, was posted to Wikipedia and Twitter. The computer IP address showed that someone in the House of Representatives executed the doxx. Other Republican Senators already have faced threats to intimidate them into voting against Kavanaugh. Senator Graham exposed the Democrats’ motive to destroy Kavanaugh’s life and hold the seat open until they think they can win in 2020.

An unknown person located in the House of Representatives on Thursday posted the personal information of Republican Sens. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, as well as Mike Lee and Orrin Hatch of Utah.

All three senators sit on the Senate Judiciary Committee, and their personal information was posted shortly after each questioned Supreme Court nominee Brett Kavanaugh during Thursday’s hearing.

“They appear to be targeting Republican members of the committee after they question Judge Kavanaugh,” a Hatch spokesman told The Daily Caller News Foundation.

The staffer noted the change revealed Hatch's home address and that Thursday was the senator's wife's birthday.

The changes were immediately highlighted by a watchdog account that monitors Wikipedia changes made using IP addresses located in the House.

Kavanaugh Accuser Julie Swetnick Used Accuser Christine Blasey Ford's Attorney, Debra Katz, to Get 'Sexual Harassment' Settlement

Julie Swetnick, the woman alleging that Judge Kavanaugh engaged in drugging and gang raping young women in the early 1980s, was represented by high-power Democrat activist lawyer, Debra Katz, and received a settlement in a sexual harassment case against her former employer, New York Life Insurance Co., ten years ago. Katz currently represents Christine Blasey Ford in her allegations of sexual misconduct against Judge Kavanaugh.

Things to ponder: Julie Swetnick waited three decades to report her allegations, just before the vote to confirm Kavanaugh; she did not report the gang rape parties to law enforcement; she was a young adult in college when she attended high school parties where she says the gang rapes occurred; she says she attended ten of those parties even though she knew that girls were being gang raped. Hmmm. -GEG
