

Trump-Derangement Syndrome on Steroids: Sociology Professor Protested President Trump by Shooting Himself in the Arm

written by GEG | September 13, 2018

Mark Bird, a professor of sociology at the College of Southern Nevada since 1993, shot himself in the arm with a .22 handgun while on campus allegedly in protest of President Trump. He is facing criminal charges that include discharging a gun within a prohibited structure, carrying a concealed weapon without a permit, and possessing a dangerous weapon on school property. -GEG

A College of Southern Nevada (CSN) sociology professor allegedly shot himself while on campus last month to protest President Trump, police said.

Mark Bird, a professor emeritus at CSN in Las Vegas, was found suffering from a self-inflicted gunshot wound on the morning of August 28, Richard Lake, a CSN spokesman, told Fox News. He was treated for the injury to his arm and was arrested, Lake said.

Bird was charged with carrying a concealed weapon without a permit, discharging a gun within a prohibited structure and possessing a dangerous weapon on school property, the Las Vegas Review-Journal reported.

In their report, police said Bird told them he shot himself near a campus bathroom to protest Trump, according to the Review-Journal. A $100 bill was also taped inside the bathroom with a note indicating it was "for the janitor," the report said.

Read full article here...