

8-Year Old German Girl Stabbed by Arab Child in School – Teacher Makes Her Stay Until School Day Ends

Yara, an ethnic German girl, was a student at an immigrant-majority school in Germany where she was the only child who was fluent in the national language. She was bullied by the migrant children daily and stabbed by an Arab child. The teacher made her finish out the school day despite having been cut in the abdomen with a sharp object. The school board was notified and Yara changed schools.

A news item from German broadcaster Sat 1 tells about the traumatic experience 8-year-old Yara had at a migrant majority school. She became an outcast, was bullied and even stabbed.

Little Yara was the last person in her classroom who spoke German at home. Her school can be characterised as a migrant majority school with Turks and Arab migrants as students.

“They needed to employ an interpreter to translate from German to Turkish or Arabic in order for the Turkish, Arabic people to even understand what was going on. I felt a bit lost and that’s when I realised how it must feel for my daughter,” the girl’s father, Mike F., tells Sat 1.

Read full article here...

Hopelessness Causes 50-Year Peak in Suicide, Lowering Life Expectancy in US. Drug Use Also Rising.

The suicide rate in America has reached a 50-year peak. In 2017, the US had 2.8 million deaths, a full 70,000 more than the previous year, contributing to a decline in the overall life expectancy rate. The life expectancy now stands at 78.6 years. A disease prevention expert says the rising death rate stems from a sense of hopelessness among Americans. Accidental overdoses account for more than a third of unintentional injury deaths while intentional drug overdoses account for about a tenth of the suicides.

America will have to curtail its escalating suicide rate if it ever hopes to become truly great again.

According to the Associated Press, the suicide rate in America has reached a 50-year peak. In 2017, the United States had 2.8 million deaths, a full 70,000 more than the previous year. While the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says the spike somewhat reflects the aging population, it's the spike in younger age groups that raises the most concern.

“These sobering statistics are a wake-up call that we are losing too many Americans, too early and too often, to conditions that are preventable,” Dr. Robert Redfield, the CDC’s director, said in a statement.

In 2017, there were 47,000 suicides in the United States. In 2016, there were 45,000. The numbers keep climbing, contributing to a decline in the overall life expectancy rate, which began to fall in 2015 and 2017 after several decades of escalation. It has not seen such a dip since the late 1910’s, when World War I and the worst flu epidemic claimed one million lives. Back then, the life expectancy was 39 years. The life expectancy now stands at 78.6 years, down one-tenth from last year.

“We’ve never really seen anything like this,” said Robert Anderson, who oversees CDC death statistics.

Of the 10 leading causes of death, only the cancer rate fell in 2017, while increases were observed in suicide, stroke, diabetes, Alzheimer’s flu/pneumonia, chronic lower respiratory diseases and unintentional injuries.

Dr. William Dietz, a disease prevention expert at George Washington University, says the rising death rate stems from a sense of hopelessness among Americans. “I really do believe that people are increasingly hopeless, and that that leads to drug use, it leads potentially to suicide,” he said.

The death rate for drug overdoses rose about 10% in 2017. Accidental overdoses account for more than a third of unintentional injury deaths while intentional drug overdoses account for about a tenth of the suicides.

Read full article here...

The Salvini Decree Becomes Law and Italy Moves Closer to Deporting 500,000 Illegal Aliens

Matteo Salvini, Italy's Interior Minister, has become the most popular politician in the country by keeping his campaign promise and reducing immigration. Parliament passed legislation to grant asylum only to those fleeing war or who are persecuted. Migrants who received asylum for humanitarian purposes are likely to be deported when their documents expire. Salvini also refused to sign the suicidal UN global migration pact. The popularity of Salvini's right-wing party, the League, has risen in the polls and nearly doubled in support.