

Trump Tweeted He Wants 5G and 6G in America As Soon As Possible!

Last week, Trump tweeted that he wants 5G and even 6G technology in the US as soon as possible, claiming that the US must always be the leader, especially in technology. People will be exposed in their homes to 5G, which utilizes millimeter wave technology that causes cancer. China is the model for technological tyranny and is using technology and applying punishments designed to modify behavior. 5G brings automation, which will force tens of millions of Americans out of their jobs. Commentator Gary Gileno says Trump was installed to pacify the right, but he is bringing in harmful technology. While the Democrats and the courts have blocked Trump's every move, they are allowing Trump's roll out of 5G as both parties want absolute control over the people.

Federal Judge Rules Male-Only Military Draft Is Unconstitutional

Texas: US District Judge Gray Miller, a George W. Bush appointee, ruled in favor of a men's rights group, declaring that the male-only military draft is unconstitutional. In 1981, the Supreme Court ruled that the all-male draft was "fully justified" because women could not fulfill combat roles, however, Judge Miller said that the discrimination may have been justified in the past, but men and women are now equally able to fight.

Draft our daughters.

A federal judge in Texas ruled late Friday that the male-only military draft is unconstitutional, declaring that "the time has passed" for a debate whether women belong in combat.

US District Judge Gray Miller, a George W. Bush appointee, dealt a huge blow to the current Selective Service System since the SCOTUS upheld the draft in a 1981 ruling.

In Rostker v. Goldberg, the Supreme Court ruled that the all-male draft was “fully justified” because women could not fulfill combat roles.

USA Today reported:

U.S. District Judge Gray Miller ruled late Friday that while historical restrictions on women serving in combat “may have justified past discrimination,” men and women are now equally able to fight. In 2015, the Pentagon lifted all restrictions for women in military service.

The case was brought by the National Coalition For Men, a men’s rights group, and two men who argued the all-male draft was unfair.

Men who fail to register with the Selective Service System at their 18th birthday can be denied public benefits such as federal employment and student loans. Women cannot register for Selective Service.

The ruling comes as an 11-member commission is studying the future of the draft, including whether women should be included or whether there should continue to be draft registration at all.

The National Commission on Military, National and Public Service released an interim report last month giving no hints on where it would come down on those questions. But, commission chairman Joe Heck told USA

TODAY, "I don't think we will remain with the status quo."

The lawyer representing the two men who brought the lawsuit said,

"Either they need to get rid of the draft registration, or they need to require women to do the same thing that men do."

Gray Miller's ruling was a declaration, not an injunction which means the court did not specifically say how the government should change the Selective Service System, USA Today reported.

The left has been pushing to put women in all-male combat units for years.

US Judge Says Prosecutors Violated the Rights of Victims in Jeffrey Epstein Underage Sex Abuse Case. Trump's Sec'y of Labor and Robert Mueller Are Under Fire.

US District Judge Kenneth Marra ruled that in 2008, federal prosecutors in Florida violated the rights of victims by secretly reaching a non-prosecution agreement with wealthy financier, Jeffrey Epstein, who was accused of sexually abusing at least 60 of underage girls and recruiting them for prostitution. Epstein spent a mere 13 months in jail, paid financial settlements to victims and is a registered sex offender. The prosecutors failed to consult with the victims when negotiating the non-prosecution agreement, in violation of federal law. Judge Marra failed to overturn the agreement asked prosecutors and victims' lawyers to recommend in 15 days how to move forward, giving the guilty parties time to settle with the victims.

The Justice Department recently opened a separate investigation into the handling of the Epstein case to determine whether prosecutors committed professional misconduct. Alexander Acosta was the US attorney in Miami at the time and brokered the deal. He now sits in Trump's cabinet and is his Secretary of Labor. Special counsel Robert Mueller led the FBI when the deal was brokered and also has culpability.

There is a two-tier justice system, one for wealthy and politically connected that allows them to evade accountability and punishment, and another for the public that denies justice for victims.

Federal prosecutors in Florida violated the rights of victims by secretly reaching a non-prosecution agreement with a wealthy financier accused of sexually abusing dozens of underage girls, a federal judge ruled Thursday.

Pockets of the Future: Robert Mueller, Jeffrey Epstein and the FBI Connection

Additional Source:

Ten years after convicted Palm Beach sex offender Jeffrey Epstein escaped federal charges in connection with allegations that he paid dozens of teenage girls for sex, the FBI last week released what appears to be an explosive explanation for what many have long described as a sweetheart deal.

"Epstein has also provided information to the FBI as agreed upon," agents wrote in one of dozens of heavily redacted, decade-old memos that were unexpectedly and inexplicably posted on an FBI website known as “The Vault.”

The simple declaration stunned those who have been following the tortuous and celebrity-studded case for years.
It
rekindled talk that the billionaire’s 2008 decision to plead guilty to state charges to make the federal investigation disappear was part of a cover up to protect Epstein’s high-powered friends, including President Donald Trump, former President Bill Clinton and Britain’s Prince Andrew.

“That sentence obviously means something but I, too, am at a loss as to what it really means,” said attorney Brad Edwards, who for a decade has been trying to unravel the mystery of Epstein’s plea deal. “If there was some cooperation I would have expected that we would have been told.
However, nothing surprises me at this point.”

In recent years, federal prosecutors have offered various explanations for why they agreed to drop the case they were building against the

65-year-old enigmatic money manager if he pleaded guilty to state prostitution charges. In court papers, they have said they wanted to get justice for Epstein's young victims but worried a jury wouldn't believe them.

So, they have said, they negotiated a deal, allowing Epstein to plead guilty in Palm Beach County Circuit Court to one count of soliciting a minor for prostitution and another charge of soliciting prostitution. In exchange, federal prosecutors agreed to close their investigation. They have said they had no idea Epstein would only serve 13 months of an 18-month sentence in a vacant wing of the county stockade – a cell he was allowed to leave 16 hours a day, six days a week.

While voicing dismay at his lax punishment, prosecutors have pointed out that the plea deal required Epstein to pay the roughly 30 young women who filed civil lawsuits against him. Further, they said his guilty pleas force him to register as a sex offender for the rest of his life, potentially protecting other girls from abuse in the future.

However, over the years, they have never suggested that Epstein provided them any information in return.

Like Edwards, two people close to the long-closed federal investigation said they were flummoxed by the sentence in the FBI's memo that was written in September 2008, roughly two months after Epstein pleaded guilty in state court.

"I have never, ever heard of Jeffrey Epstein cooperating in any sense of the word," said one official, who requested anonymity because of the top role the person played in the investigation. "I am stumped. It's totally out of left field."

Another individual with ties to the case voiced similar views. Epstein may have been required to talk to FBI agents but it's unlikely he offered anything that would incriminate others, said the person, who declined to be identified because of ongoing efforts to help Epstein's victims challenge the plea deal. "I don't think he ever told the truth," the person said.

Venezuela: Opposition Leader Juan Guaidó Has Ties with the CIA and Blood on His Hands. He Meets with VP Mike Pence Today.

Opposition Leader Juan Guaidó, who declared himself President with the support of the US, Canada, and Europe, trained with an elite team in Serbia to overthrow the government using student shock troops and weaponized protests. He has ties with the CIA and is linked to a number of violent operations, which have made his party, 'Popular will' unpopular, with less than 20% support.

Guaidó is meeting with Vice President Pence today at the Lima Group summit supporting the ouster of Maduro.

Summary by JW Williams

The Greyzone Project published an article on Juan Guaidó, who declared himself the President of Venezuela. He leads 'Popular Will', the most violent faction of Venezuela's opposition party. His party, however, has less than 20% support because of its violent tactics.

In 2005, five Venezuelan student leaders trained in Serbia to bring about a revolt that eventually toppled Slobodan Milosevic. They used a revolutionary model that uses student shock troops to weaponize protests as a hybrid form of warfare. The movement is funded by the National Endowment for Democracy, a CIA front group, and is deployed against regimes that are not compliant with US objectives.

In 2010, 'Popular Will' exploited a severe drought that affected electrical output and caused discontent. At this same time, it and other opposition groups were receiving $40-50 million a year from US government organizations like USAID and the National Endowment for Democracy, according to a Spanish think tank. President Trump appointed Elliot Abrams as special US envoy to Venezuela. This stoked fears of a bloody proxy war, because Abrams is the convicted Iran-Contra felon who oversaw arming right-wing death squads during the 1980's in Nicaragua, El Salvador, and Guatemala.

Vice President Mike Pence has been involved in the overthrow of Maduro since before December 2018 when he called to affirm his support for Guaido who organized mass protests against Maduro following his victory in the election.

Guaido is meeting with VP Mike Pence on Monday as part of a summit with the Lima Group, a meeting of 12 American states which have recognized Guaido as the "legitimate" leader of Venezuela.

Over the weekend, at least four people were killed and many more injured in clashes at the border, blockaded by Maduro's military, as the US tried to deliver humanitarian aid. Three aid trucks caught fire at the Colombian border. In the town of Santa Elena de Uairén, pro-government armed gangs and national guard members took to the streets to try and disperse opposition supporters. Sixty members of Maduro's security force defected, but it was not enough to deliver the aid. Caracas has reportedly allowed in hundreds of tons of Russian and other international aid and supplies.

Venezuela's Foreign Minister Jorge Arreaza blamed Secretary of State and former CIA boss Mike Pompeo for staging a false flag when a truck carrying US aid was burned.

Maduro says US aid was meant to destabilize his government as military transport planes have been landing in US ally Colombia airstrips, as part of broader efforts provoke a coup.

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo told Fox News that Maduro regime's days are "numbered" and that "every option" is on the table toward making that happen.

Democrat Kamala Harris Calls for Slavery Reparations While She Is a Descendant of a Jamaican Slave Owner

Last week, Kamala Harris voiced her support for reparations for slavery of blacks, which ended over 150 years ago, calling for vague changes in policies policies and structures. Kamala's father, Donald Harris, a retired professor of economics at Stanford University, wrote that his paternal grandmother, Christiana Brown, was a direct descendant of Hamilton Brown, a Northern Irish Protestant plantation owner who owned slaves. While Kamala's family may have been produced from Hamilton forcing himself on one of the slave women, Donald Harris' reported that Christiana Brown carried the same name as Hamilton Brown and owned a general store in town while her sons worked the family farmland at Orange Hill. They profited from the family name, making them culpable for any suffering of slaves who worked the plantation, if the left follows its own standards by blaming current generations for sins committed by ancestors who passed long ago. Critics are waiting for her to be the first to pay reparations.

Sen Kamala Harris (D-Calif) is on the record as backing "some form of reparations” for slavery. In a recent interview, Harris agreed with the host’s suggestion that government reparations for black Americans were necessary to address past discrimination. The 2020 presidential hopeful later “affirmed that support” in a statement to The New York Times.

“We have to be honest that people in this country do not start from the same place or have access to the same opportunities,” she said in an interview with “The Breakfast Club.”

Harris continued:

Well look, I think that we have got to address that again, it's back to the inequities. There, through—look, America has a history of 200 years of slavery. We had Jim Crow. We had legal segregation in America for a very long time. The Voting Rights Act was only strong for 50 years and then they wiped it out with this United States Supreme Court in the Shelby decision, to the point that 22 states immediately thereafter put in place laws that one court found were crafted with surgical precision to have black people not be able to vote.

So we've got to recognize, back to that earlier point, people aren't starting out on the same base, in terms of their ability to succeed and so we have got to recognize that and give people a lift up. And, there are a number of ways to do it. Part of my initiative again around the "Lift Act" is that same point—you lifting people up who are making less than a hundred thousand dollars a year. What I want to do about rent is the same thing. What we need to do around education and understanding disparities, what we need to do around HBCUs. But we have a history of racism in America.

Harris doesn't owe anyone in America, but does she have some mea culpas to make in Jamaica? Her father, Donald J. Harris, wrote an extensive essay about the family's heritage in Jamaica at Jamaican Global Online in January, claiming to be the descendant of a famed slave owner.

My roots go back, within my lifetime, to my paternal grandmother Miss Chrishy (née Christiana Brown, descendant of Hamilton Brown who is on record as plantation and slave owner and founder of Brown's Town) and to my maternal grandmother Miss Iris (née Iris Finegan, farmer and educator, from Aenon Town and Inverness, ancestry unknown to me). The

Harris name comes from my paternal grandfather Joseph Alexander Harris, land-owner and agricultural "produce" exporter (mostly pimento or all-spice), who died in 1939 one year after I was born and is buried in the church yard of the magnificent Anglican Church which Hamilton Brown built in Brown's Town (and where, as a child, I learned the catechism, was baptized and confirmed, and served as an acolyte).

Hamilton

Brown was born in 1776 in Ireland. He became a sugar plantation owner and founder of Brown's Town in Jamaica, according to university papers, textbooks, and historical documents. Henry Whiteley wrote a pamphlet entitled "Three months in Jamaica in 1832, Comprising a Residence on a Sugar Plantation," where he describes Brown's views on his slaves:

The same day I dined at St. Ann's Bay, on board the vessel I arrived in, in the company with several colonists, among whom was Mr. Hamilton Brown, representative for the parish of St. Ann in the Colonial Assembly... I was rather startled to hear that gentleman swear by his Maker that that Order should never be adopted in Jamaica; nor would the planters of Jamaica, he said, permit the interference of the Home

Government with their slaves in any shape. A great deal was said by him and others present about the happiness and comfort enjoyed by the slaves, and the many advantages possessed by them of which the poor in England were destitute. Among other circumstances mentioned in proof of this, Mr. Robinson, a wharfinger, stated that a slave in that town had sent out printed cards to invite a part of his negro acquaintance to a supper party. One of these cards was handed to Mr. Hamilton Brown, who said he would present it to the Governor, as a proof of the comfortable condition of the slave population.

But later that day, after he witnessed slaves being punished by Brown's overseer...

Hat Crime Or Hate Crime? Leftists Flip Their Lids and Assault People Wearing 'Make America Great Again' Trump Hats

A recent assault on Trump supporters took place in Kentucky when James Phillips, 57, allegedly pulled a gun on Terry Pierce and his wife in Sam's Club because they were wearing MAGA hats. Phillips has two weapon charges in Tennessee, including unlawful possession in 2009, and a felony aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in 2013 that was resolved as a misdemeanor. Police say Phillips has a current concealed carry permit in Tennessee.

In a separate incident, Rosaine Santos, a 41-year-old immigrant from Brazil, living in Falmouth, Massachusetts, was charged with disorderly conduct, assault and battery after she tried to grab a man's MAGA hat off his head and took another swipe at him as police escorted her out of a Mexican restaurant. According to police, Santos was upset that a 23-year old white male, Bryton Turner, had the audacity to wear the iconic red hat at the Mexican eatery because Trump supports a wall on the US southern border with Mexico. She later said that she may have had too much to drink, but that she is the real victim because she has been the target of discrimination many times in the past.

Gene Edited CRISPR Twins May Have Higher IQ and Silicon Valley Wants to Exploit the Technology

Chinese scientist, He Jiankui, led a controversial experiment, 'editing' the genes of embryos from seven couples using the CRISPR tool that swaps or removes a gene at a precise spot. He removed the CCR5 gene in an effort to immunize against HIV. New research shows that twins Lulu and Nana may have improved memory and enhanced cognition. People who naturally lack CCR5 recover more quickly from strokes and people missing at least one copy of the gene seem to go further in school, suggesting a possible role in everyday intelligence. Critics worry that CRISPR technology could one day be used to create super-intelligent humans, perhaps as part of a biotechnology race between the US and China. Silicon Valley has a keen interest in designer babies with higher intelligence.

A pair of Chinese twins who were gene-edited for resistance to HIV may also have 'supercharged' brains, along with possible resistance to age-related cognitive diseases such as Alzheimer's.

In a controversial experiment led by Chinese scientist He Jiankui, the embryos of seven couples had their genes "edited" using a tool known as CRISPR. By removing a gene called CCR5, He sought to create a natural immunity to HIV – which requires CCR5 to enter blood cells.

Based on new research, however, twins Lulu and Nana may have also been left with improved memory and enhanced cognition, according to MIT Technology Review. They may also enjoy some degree of protection from Alzheimer's Disease and other maladies which are rapidly being linked to chronic inflammation, as some groups of mice without CCR5 – or who have been given CCR5 inhibitors, experience less severe dementia or Alzheimer's symptoms.

"The answer is likely yes, it did affect their brains," says UCLA neurobiologist Alcino J. Silva, whose lab discovered a link between CCR5 and the brain's ability to form new connections.

“The simplest interpretation is that those mutations will probably have an impact on cognitive function in the twins,” says Silva, adding that the exact effect on the girls' cognition cannot be predicted, which is “why it should not be done.”

Jiankui's human experiments drew harsh rebuke after news of Lulu and Nana's birth in late October or early November, and has reportedly been fired from his position at the Southern University of Science and Technology (SUSTech) in Shenzhen, China. Jiankui says there are more gene-edited babies on the way.
