

New York Gets New 'Muslim Community Patrol' with Squad Cars the Look Like Police Vehicles

New York is encouraging culture-specific security groups, and has allowed the Muslim Community Patrol to acquire cars that look nearly identical to police vehicles. The Muslim group is joining the Jewish enclave's Shomrim security force and the Brooklyn Asian Safety Patrol. The American melting pot has been scrapped. -GEG

New York's Muslim community has a new security group watching over it.

A car from the new Muslim Community Patrol has been spotted around the city, joining the Jewish enclave's Shomrim and the Brooklyn Asian Safety Patrol among New York's culture-specific security groups.

The white Ford Taurus bears insignia nearly identical to those of an NYPD patrol car – with blue horizontal stripes down the sides,

a shield
on the front driver's side door and the words "Muslim Community Patrol" descending on the rear door, where a department vehicle would say
"Courtesy Professionalism Respect."
