

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez' Mother Flees from New York to Florida to Escape from the High Tax Burden Her Daughter Promotes

written by GEG | March 8, 2019

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez' mother, Blanca, left the liberal state of New York that heavily taxes residents claiming that her property tax burden was too high as she was paying $10,000 per year, compared to only $600 per year in property tax in "stress-free" Florida. Meanwhile, her daughter is pushing to massively raise taxes to implement her Green New Deal that would cost tens of trillions of dollars and would break the country.

The mother of soak-the-rich Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez said she was forced to flee the Big Apple and move to Florida because the property taxes were so high.

"I was paying $10,000 a year in real estate taxes up north. I'm paying $600 a year in Florida. It's stress-free down here," Blanca Ocasio-Cortez told the Daily Mail from her home in Eustis, a town of less than 20,000 in central Florida north of Orlando.

The mother of two – who calls herself BOC – said she picked Eustis because a relative already lived there, and right before Christmas 2016, she paid $87,000 for an 860-square-foot home on a quiet street that dead-ends at a cemetery.
