

Far-Right Extremists In Canada And Have Adopted Trump's Symbols Own

Canadian Police Claim They Cannot Locate Surveillance Videos of the 2017 Mosque Shooting. Really!

Dan Dicks, the owner of the 'Press for Truth' YouTube channel, received a response from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to his letter sent in 2017 requesting permission to inspect the surveillance video from six different cameras that recorded the January, 2017, mosque shooting in French Quebec. The RCMP claimed they were unable to "locate records which respond to your request." [Dan Dicks explains what this response means.]
-GEG

Cher Discovers Welfare State Cannot Support Itself Even Without Open Borders Added to Its Burden

After President Trump threatened to bus hordes of inbound migrants into sanctuary cities and the sanctuary state of California, Cher, the actress and singer who once advocated welcoming migrants into their homes, has changed her mind. She tweeted, "I Understand Helping struggling immigrants, But MY CITY (Los Angeles) ISNT TAKING CARE OF ITS OWN. WHAT ABOUT THE 50,000+ Citizens WHO LIVE ON THE STREETS. PPL WHO LIVE BELOW THE POVERTY LINE,&HUNGRY? If My State Can't Take Care of Its Own (Many Are VETS) How Can it Take Care of More?" President Trump Tweeted back: "I finally agree with Cher."

If you had "Cher discovers the paradox of open borders and the welfare state" on your 2019 bingo card, please collect your earnings.

Cher, welcome to the deplorables. President Trump thanks you.

While Trump and I may sound glib here, it's honestly worth unpacking this revelation. Cher unwittingly stumbled onto the most existential question the Democratic Party must answer: Do they want open borders or a welfare state? Because you can't have both.

In theory, I'm about as much as a Rothbardian dove on immigration as you can imagine. I'm every coastal strawman that Ann Coulter has ever fought with, but in earnest. I love cheap labor. I love cheap stuff. I love maximizing the efficiency of the labor market and enabling everyone to take advantage of their comparative advantages. In a theoretical universe, the only immigration restrictions I would want for people seeking work visas would be related to national security concerns and rates of cultural assimilation.

But we have a massive welfare state, and one that's deeply susceptible to being taken advantage of by people, including legal and illegal immigrants, who do not pay taxes.

In 2015, the Census Bureau found that 51% of legal and illegal immigrant households use Medicaid, cash programs including Supplemental Security Income and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, food programs, and housing programs. In 2018, they discovered that figure increased to 58% and actually soars to a whopping 63% if also accounting for earned income tax credits as a welfare source. An astounding 70% of immigrants here for a decade or longer are on at least one form of welfare. All of this ignores the access people who don't pay taxes have to emergency room services, Title X facilities, and every other public good, from roads to parks, that taxpayers fund unconditionally.

Cher, probably without knowing it, focused on the single group of people hurt the most unfairly by open borders: veterans. In Los Angeles, veterans – the single group of people the nation's entered a moral and legal contract with to ensure welfare for – comprise nearly 4,000 of the city's homeless population.

While the city's resources ought to go to getting those who put their lives on the line for the nation out of the hepatitis-ridden streets of Skid Row, instead Los Angeles shells out over $1 billion annually to illegal immigrants.

Read full article here..

Paris: Was the Notre Dame

Cathedral Fire an Accident?

Paris: Notre Dame church, a Gothic masterpiece, suffered a catastrophic fire that destroyed 800-year old timber beams, artwork, the rose windows, the 8,000-pipe organ, relics, and other priceless artifacts. Construction of the cathedral began in 1163 under the authority of Pope Alexander III and the foundation building was completed in 1260, nearly 100 years later. The church survived for eight centuries, even during such violent events as the French Revolution, religious warfare, and both World Wars. Stefan Molyneux questions the official story that the fire was accidental and presents reasons for suspecting it is part of the series of recent attacks against Catholic churches that have been blamed on ISIS. There were a dozen incidents of arson or serious vandalism against churches in just one week last month, including a fire at Saint-Sulpice, France's second largest church. There has been a 25% increase in attacks on Catholic churches in the first two months of the year compared with the same time last year.

Additional sources...

<https://www.express.co.uk/news/world/1102958/christian-persecution-france-catholic-church-christianity-religion-edouard-phillipe-isis>

<https://www.charismanews.com/opinion/75975-the-internet-erupts-with-speculation-about-who-started-the-notre-dame-cathedral-fire>

Devastating Fire at Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris Was 'Likely

Some Schools Are Offering Free Education in Return for A Share of Student's Income

In response to the current $1.6 trillion in US student debt, some schools are offering students a chance to pay for their education, not by tuition loans, but by a contracts to share a portion of their first two-years of income. Purdue University, for example, sidesteps student loans by offering student income-sharing agreements that turn students into equity investments instead of debt assets. It seems to be working well. -GEG

Step side student loans: the Lambda School is the first school to equitize human labor as a business model.

Based in California, the school teaches information technology skills online and charges zero tuition, according to Bloomberg. In fact, it even offers select students a stipend as they attend. The school's website describes it as a school that "trains people online to be software engineers at no upfront cost.”

But as always, there is a catch: what The Lambda School does ask for, is for students to pay back 17% of their income from the first two years of working, if their earnings exceed $50,000 per year. The school caps a student’s maximum payment at $30,000 and those who don’t earn $50,000 per year aren’t required to pay anything. Students also have the option of a “traditional” schooling arrangement where they pay $20,000 upfront and get to keep their future income (after the government takes its cut, of course).

As of now, there are about 1300 students enrolled and, confirming the company has investors’ seal of approval, it has already raised nearly $50 million. More importantly, its job placement record has been impressive so far, with 86% of its graduates getting jobs within 180 days of finishing their program. And the piece de resistance: the median starting salary is a whopping $60,000.

The “free market” style benefits of equitizing labor are obvious: it gives the school incentive to invest in the future of its students. The school has an incentive to train and place students where they will earn the most return on investment for the school. Additionally, students who receive stipends can use them for further investments in training, which can be valuable for hard-working students from lower income backgrounds. It's simple: higher earners pay back more and lower earners pay back less.

Already the idea is being considered for broader adoption amid traditional universities. The model would include free or reduced tuition – similar to what Purdue is now offering – in exchange for a share of students' future income. A second model would allow graduates to use a similar arrangement to pay back their federal student loans.

Read full article here...

Additional source:

<https://www.zerohedge.com/news/2019-04-11/wall-street-now-buying-college-students-stocks>

Taxes in the US Must Be Doubled to Pay for 'Medicare for All,' aka the Single-Payer Program, Promoted by the Left

Presidential candidates on the left are campaigning for 'Medicare for all,' which is single-payer government subsidized healthcare, that has a price tag of $32.6 trillion over 10 years. Seth Denson, a healthcare expert, says that the US takes in $3.6 trillion in taxes per year and would need to double taxes in order to pay for Bernie Sanders' single-payer healthcare. State-funded healthcare would eliminate insurance and about three million jobs in the insurance industry and related businesses. Polls show that 71% of Americans favor the single-payer model when they are told that it guarantees insurance for all, but support drops to only 37% when people are told that the single-payer model will increase taxes.