

Mark Zuckerberg, CEO of Facebook, Calls for Governments to Censor the Internet for 'Harmful' Speech on Issues Like Mass Immigration

Mark Zuckrberg of Facebook called for governments to regulate speech, which does not target illegal content, but targets "harmful" content that is constitutionally protected. He said that speech on "divisive political issues," such as mass immigration should be shut down by the government. FCC Commissioner Brendan Carr says that Facebook, which is worth $500 billion, is motivated to keep its stronghold in the market and the new regulations would make it difficult for start-up companies to compete.