

Poll: The Majority of Americans Reject Action Leading to a New War with Iran as Only 24% Want a Military Response

written by GEG | June 26, 2019

A poll from Hill-HarrisX revealed that Americans from all parties are against going to war with Iran: 58% of voters polled preferred a non-military response to Iran's shooting down of a US spy drone, 49% said they wanted a negotiated end to the recent hostilities while 9% said that Trump should make no action. A large number of participants, 19%, said they were unsure of what response they wanted by the government. Older participants, aged 65 and older, in the poll were the age group most averse to going to war with Iran.

As President Trump and his administration mull their next moves on Iran, a new poll found that less than a quarter of registered U.S. voters say they want the U.S. to take military action against Tehran.

A Hill-HarrisX survey taken June 22-23 found that 19 percent of voters wanted the U.S. to launch a limited military strike on Iran, the option that Trump had ordered but pulled back from at the last minute last Thursday. Five percent of respondents said the U.S. should declare war on Iran.

The majority of voters, 58 percent, preferred a non-military response to Iran's shooting down of a U.S. spy drone. Forty-nine percent of voters said they wanted a negotiated end to the recent hostilities while 9 percent said that Trump should make no action.

Read full article here...