

Google Sent Police to 'SWAT' a Whistleblower When He Leaked Their Documents Proving Interference with US Elections

written by GEG | August 16, 2019

When Google discovered he leaked the files, they contacted police who 'swatted' him, which is a harassment tactic of causing an emergency service to send a team of police and medical personnel to someone's home, as the company requested a mental-health check.