

Farmers Who Blamed German Government for Floods and Drought Lost Their Bid to Sue the German State Over Alleged Climate Change Failures

written by GEG | October 31, 2019

The Berlin Administrative Court ruled that Germany's 2020 targets to reduce emissions by 40% were not legally binding. Greenpeace claimed that Germany should be held accountable for historic emissions that it has already put into the atmosphere.