

Virginia: George Soros Helped Democrats Flip the State Blue, and the Billionaire Funded Four Prosecutors Who Were Elected to Destroy America's Justice System

Democrats won control of Virginia's government for the first time in decades. George Soros reportedly spent $1.2 million on House of Delegates and Senate races in the commonwealth, and he funneled an additional $2 million to four Democratic prosecutor candidates who won each of their elections. Before Soros entered the scene, local prosecutor candidates spent an average of $20,000 to $30,000 on their campaigns. Soros is weaponizing local prosecutors' offices to overturn the American justice system through Criminal Justice Reform that benefits criminals while ignoring victims and public safety.

In recent years, the billionaire has funded district attorney and prosecutor races in several states including California, Florida, Illinois, Mississippi, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, Texas, New York, and New Mexico. Soros has spent $16 million on 17 county races since 2014.

All four Virginia prosecutor candidates backed liberal billionaire George Soros emerged victorious in Tuesday's elections.

Soros and other liberal Democrats spent millions on prosecutor races ahead of the elections in a bid to overhaul the state's criminal justice system, supporting candidates who vowed to introduce criminal justice reform and change the state's policies on the death penalty. In addition to the $1.2 million in funds Soros spent on House of Delegates and Senate races in the commonwealth, he funneled an additional $2 million to four Democratic prosecutor candidates.

Their candidates' wins could lead to a major shift in Virginia's criminal justice system.

Among the candidates backed by Soros was Buta Biberaj, the Democrat running in the Loudon County commonwealth attorney race. Biberaj received nearly \$850,000 from the Justice and Public Safety PAC, a D.C.-based committee financed by Soros. The PAC was by far the largest donor to the campaign.

Biberaj defeated the recently appointed Republican commonwealth attorney Nicole Wittmann 51.17 percent to 48.73 percent. Biberaj also received \$18,000 in in-kind donations for canvassing and phone banking services from New Virginia Majority, a civic engagement and issue advocacy group that received \$75,000 from Soros's Justice and Public Safety PAC earlier this year.

Steve Descano, the liberal candidate in Fairfax County, was the recipient of \$600,000 from Soros's PAC. Descano defeated independent candidate Jonathan Fahey 61.34 percent to 38.38 percent. Descano expressed interest in putting together a coalition of prosecutors to lobby for progressive legislation following the elections. Soros's PAC was the most generous donor to his campaign.

Read full article here...