

Antifa and Leftists Swarmed New York City to Protest Against Police and Paying Subway Fares

Grand Central Station in New York: An Antifa group, known as 'Decolonize This Place' and 'FTP3' drew hundreds of activists who swarmed the subway demanding the removal of police and subway fares. The protesters, many of them masked, were hopping turnstiles, vandalizing public transit platforms and store fronts, and they poured glue over subway turnstiles. Arrests were made at several different locations throughout the city.

Hundreds of anti-cop Antifa demonstrators caused havoc in New York City on Friday evening.

The protest, which is being referred to by Antifa as a "f-ck the police" demonstration or "J31," for the date, are not only protesting police, but also subway fares.

A giant gathering at Grand Central right now demanding free transit in NYC, and cops out of our subways.

Police just arrested one man for unknown reasons and the crowd surged forward, chanting:

"THE WHOLE WORLD IS WATCHING!" pic.twitter.com/H13UYHUdch

– Joshua Potash (@JoshuaPotash) January 31, 2020

More actions today ☐☐ pic.twitter.com/6AW6uNvXqC

– DecolonizeThisPlace (@decolonize_this) January 31, 2020

“The mood for J31 is simple: f-ck your $2.75. No cops in the MTA. Free transit. No harassment, period, and full accessibility,” a masked thug in a promo video for the protest said. “We hope that you come through and move with us on J31. F-ck the police.”

WHOSE STREETS @telemundonews @univision @remezcla @wearemitu
@theroot @theatlantic @guardian @latimes @theintercept
@LatinoUSA @buzzfeed @propublica @artnet @artnews
@culturestrike @artforum @hyperallergic
pic.twitter.com/rTWXFgLQ5Z

– DecolonizeThisPlace (@decolonize_this) February 1, 2020

The protesters, many of them masked, were hopping turnstiles and vandalizing public transit platforms, store fronts, and anything else they could get their hands on.

Some of the demonstrators even rigged subway station doors open with bike locks and violin strings to allow people to access the subway platforms without paying.

Someone used a bike lock on an exit door to prevent it from closing. Respect to comrade u-lock for supporting today's fare strike as part of J31. Cops out of the subways and free public transportation! Follow @decolonize_this for updates today, and be at Grand Central at 5pm.
pic.twitter.com/qQ1Wli5MP0

– Fuck Steven Crowder (@andyratto) January 31, 2020

violin string for this one @decolonize_this #ftp3 #J31 pic.twitter.com/2B0HUYZizz

– [Socialists for Pete] (@welostnathan) January 31, 2020

Now || We are receiving reports “Chained open + superglue in the swipes” on #J31 #FTP3 pic.twitter.com/qneyxY5XFJ

– DecolonizeThisPlace (@decolonize_this) January 31, 2020

There was a massive police presence and multiple arrests have been made at several different locations throughout the city.

Read full article here...

Media Lambasts Judicial Watch after it Exposed 8 Iowa Counties with Voter Registration Over 100%

Iowa: Judicial Watch found eight counties with registration rates over 100% of the voting age population and nearly three dozen counties with a registration rate over 95%, which is extraordinarily high. Judicial Watch president, Tom Fitton, said that it is “shameful” that the secretary state of Iowa would mislead Iowans and Americans about the accuracy of the state’s registration rolls. Mainstream media is contesting the watchdog’s findings, but it based its analysis on official voter registration data provided by Iowa to the federal Election Assistance Commission (EAC) and the Iowa secretary of state’s registration data.

Judicial Watch President Tom Fitton made the following statement regarding the Iowa secretary of state misleading Americans and state residents about the accuracy of Iowa’s registration rolls:

It is shameful that the secretary state of Iowa would mislead Iowans and Americans about the accuracy of the state’s registration rolls.

Judicial Watch’s analysis of Iowa’s state registration rolls is based on official voter registration data provided by Iowa to the federal Election Assistance Commission (EAC) for publication in 2019. Data concerning such registrations must be reported to the EAC by law under federal regulation 11 C.F.R. § 9428.7.

Based on this federal data, Judicial Watch found eight counties with registration rates over 100% of the voting age population. The next reliable report on Iowa’s registration rolls won’t occur until after the November election, as the EAC’s next report will be released in 2021.

The Iowa secretary of state’s release of interim voter registration data further confirms our concerns and shows that five of the eight counties we listed are still over 100%. Nearly three dozen counties have a registration rate over 95% of the voter age population, which is extraordinarily high. Our data has proven to be a strong indicator of voter registration issues and a basis for further inquiry. Based on lawsuits alleging the same voter registration issues, Judicial Watch has obtained three statewide settlement agreements, including a consent decree in the Commonwealth of Kentucky in 2018 and a settlement with Los Angeles County and the State of California in 2019.

California last year began the process of removing up to 1.5 million “inactive” names from Los Angeles County voter rolls. Kentucky also began a cleanup of up to 150,000 names last year. In 2018, the Supreme Court upheld a voter roll clean up in Ohio that resulted from a Judicial Watch settlement. A federal court ordered the State of Maryland to produce voter list data for its largest county based on the work of Judicial Watch. Our approach has survived federal court scrutiny in four states.

Iowa’s Secretary of State and local officials need to clean up the election rolls and reassure voters that the state’s election process is being administered in compliance with federal law and common sense.

Read full article here...

Additional source:

Washington Post Colludes with Tech Giants in Effort to Deplatform Tom Fitton, Judicial Watch For Posting Accurate Data on Iowa Voting Rolls

Swine-Flu 'Pandemic' Was Hyped to Make Billions for Vaccine Industry, World Health Organization, and CDC

Three articles show that billions of dollars were spent worldwide on the H1N1 Swine Flu "epidemic" that was a money-making scheme.

The British medical journal (BMJ) revealed that top scientists who convinced the World Health Organization (WHO) to declare H1N1 a global pandemic held close financial ties to the drug companies that profited from the sale of those vaccines.

https://www.naturalnews.com/028936_WHO_vaccines.html

Baxter, the US vaccine manufacturer, paid at least numerous huge settlements, some of them for millions of dollars after being accused of fraud amid allegations that it had overpriced medicines by as much as 1,300%.

<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2009/oct/11/swine-flu-vaccine-baxter>

Drug companies have sold $1.5 billion worth of swine flu shots, in addition to the $1 billion for seasonal flu they booked earlier in 2009. Congress has set aside more than $10 billion to research flu viruses, monitor H1N1's progress and educate the public about prevention.

<https://abcnews.go.com/Business/big-business-swine-flu/story?id=8820642>

World Health Organization Inflates Numbers of Sick People to Create Fake Epidemics to Sell Vaccines

The CDC claimed that, at the height of the Swine Flu epidemic in 2009, there were 22 MILLION cases in the US, yet the overwhelming number of US blood samples sent to labs came back with no sign of Swine Flu or any other kind of flu. The West Nile, Bird Flu, Zika, and the eruption of Swine Flu in 1976 were all predicted to sweep across the world. They were all duds, and the number actually infected was minuscule. Jon Rappoport suggests that the purpose of the latest Chinese “epidemic” and the quarantine of tens of millions of people is to get us used to thinking that it is normal and proper for governments to clamp down on all human activity in the name of public health – even if the threat is greatly exaggerated or perhaps non-existent. -GEG

Now that the vaccine-promoting PR agency called the World Health Organization has declared a coronavirus global emergency, we move into a serious phase of the “case numbers” game.

Hold your hats. There are all sorts of categories and terms that pop up. You’re not supposed to understand them. You’re supposed to let them wash over you and submit to the idea that we’re all potential victims being sucked into a giant vortex—and the only hope of escape depends on the rush-rush-rush deployment of an experimental vaccine.

What are these terms and categories? There are “confirmed cases.” There are “infected people.” There are “carriers of the virus.” There are “mild cases.” “Asymptomatic cases.” “Projected cases.” There is “the probability that many cases have avoided detection.” There is “tested positive for the virus.” There is “computer modeling of case estimates.” “Virus spreaders.” “Exploding too quickly to track accurately.” “Ate an infected bat.” “Ate a snake.” “Extra-terrestrial alien cases”—oops, wrong article.

Interesting factoid. In 2003, there was another coronavirus pandemic called SARS. Then, as now, experts at the World Health Organization (WHO) predicted a dire wildfire of global cases. Then, as now, a state of emergency was declared. WHO issued an advisory, telling people not to fly into Toronto, because that city was “infected.” When all was said and done, the official number of deaths from SARS?

800.

Out of 7 billion people.

But no matter. The pros are still calling SARS, in retrospect, a serious epidemic. A more proper technical term would be: dud.

In prior articles in this series, I’ve detailed how the US Centers for Disease Control lied at an astounding level, about case numbers, in the so-called Swine Flu epidemic (2009). The overwhelming percentage of US blood samples sent to labs, from Swine Flu patients, were coming back with no sign of Swine Flu or any other kind of flu. Sharyl Attkisson, a star investigative reporter working for CBS News at the time, exposed this fraud. Yet, the CDC eventually went on to claim that, at the “height of the Swine Flu epidemic,” there were 22 MILLION cases in the US. I kid you not. These experts are big-league liars. They're champions. They're in the Hall of Fame.

If you're working for a major public health agency, cooking up case numbers and exploiting fear are part of your every-day arsenal. They have to be. Otherwise, you could be caught with your pants down. "Sorry, folks, that world-ending global pandemic we were telling you about last week? It didn't pan out. Most of the case are mild, on the order of a bad cold, and a lot of cases we pretty much made up. We got carried away. After all, we're basic salespeople for the vaccine industry..."

Remember West Nile, bird flu, Zika, and way back, the Swine Flu scare of 1976? They were all hyped to the sky. They were all predicted to sweep across the world. They were all connected, by some people, to "engineered viruses in biowar labs, against which we don't stand a chance." And they were all duds. The case numbers—when the smoke cleared—were miniscule. That's called a CLUE.

But you see, there is a thing called The Church of the Virus. It's quite amazing. People simply hear the word VIRUS and they fall down on their knees. Some of these people were, up to the moment when an epidemic was declared, saying that building up the immune system through basic natural means was a fine defense against germs, BUT—all of a sudden, they're paralyzed and hypnotized by The Word. VIRUS. Now they'll go the World Health Organization one better. That Agency is saying there may be 10,000 cases? The paralyzed members of the Church will say, "No, there are a hundred thousand cases. Probably a million by nightfall."

So my strategy is to get out ahead of the Church. I'm saying: there are 30 trillion cases of the Chinese epidemic, we're all locked down, we're all dead already. Okay? End of story. It's been told. NOW, let's look around. Are there still people? Are we still here? Are there trees and animals and clouds and sky?

I work from clues and history and pieces of evidence. In prior articles in this epidemic series (archive here), I've laid out the best evidence I can find. I've raised uncomfortable and unpleasant questions and answered them. I've explained likely motives for all the lying and fabricating. I've detailed cover-ups. I've described who benefits from so-called epidemics.

At a high level, the macro-level, this Chinese "epidemic" is supposed to connect all the people of Earth, and not in a good way. It's yet one more strategy to execute a stage-magic Collectivist trick. To make us think there are no nations, no sovereign entities of any kind on the planet. No individuals with a right to choose. We're all the huddled masses, yearning to be vaccinated. We're marching, when told, according to orders from above. We're all victims. We all depend on a congealing global super-state. We should all thank God for China. It's shown us the way. The locking down and quarantining of millions of people is a fine and just and proper thing. It sets an example we may soon have to follow, with good cheer and faith.

Read full article here...

Eight States Consider Criminalizing Sex-Change Surgeries and Sex Hormones for Kids

Treating children diagnosed with gender dysphoria may include surgery and hormone injections, which can lead to infertility and irreversible biological damage. Eight state legislatures, including Missouri, Florida, Illinois, Oklahoma, Colorado, South Carolina, Kentucky, and South Dakota, introduced bills this year that would prohibit doctors from using these procedures when treating adolescents. Lawmakers in Texas, Utah, and Georgia have promised to introduce similar bills once their legislative sessions begin. A New Hampshire bill would not focus on doctors directly but would classify gender-altering for minors as child abuse. A 2018 study found that the risk of developing a mental-health condition was 300% to 1300% higher for transgender and gender-diverse children than for normal gendered peers. There are approximately 150,000 transgender youth between the ages of 13 and 17 in the United States. -GEG

A bill that could make it a felony to perform sex-change surgeries on minors, as well as inject them with drugs to delay puberty, is set to go before a Florida House subcommittee next week, as more states consider similar motions.

The 'Vulnerable Child Protection Act' will be on the agenda of the Florida House Quality subcommittee when it meets on Monday.

The bill is sponsored by Republican Rep. Anthony Sabatini, who has long opposed the practice that permits a doctor to treat underage patients suffering from 'gender dysphoria' with sex-change surgery and medicine that slows the onset of puberty, providing their parents approve the procedure.

“Common sense,” the lawmaker tweeted on Saturday, welcoming the news of his proposal moving forward.

Common sense <https://t.co/WVeJMmi9Z5>

– Anthony Sabatini (@AnthonySabatini) February 1, 2020

If passed, the law would make it a second-degree felony for any healthcare provider to engage in the activity aimed at altering a minor’s sex.

When he filed the bill back in January, the lawmaker compared sex-change treatment to maiming, tweeting that “no parent should be allowed to sterilize or permanently disfigure a child.”

Today I filed HB 1365, the Vulnerable Child Protection Act. This Bill makes it a felony for a health care practitioner to surgically or medically change the sex of a minor. No parent should be allowed to sterilize or permanently disfigure a child. <https://t.co/8fsi61HAPM>

– Anthony Sabatini (@AnthonySabatini) January 13, 2020

The proposed law has drawn swift push-back from Democrats, arguing that the bill outlaws “life-saving healthcare treatment” for teenagers who have not yet come of age. Critics of the ban argue that children who cannot receive such treatment are at a higher risk of depression and suicide.

Speaking to the Blaze on Saturday, Sabatini accused Democrats in the Republican-controlled legislature who are attempting to shoot down his proposal of “furthering a political agenda” at the expense of children’s health. Citing medical findings on the issue, the lawmaker said that about 80 percent of children tend to “outgrow” their body dysphoria.

While the Florida bill still has many hoops to go through before it can become a law, a similar bill has already cleared the House of Representatives in South Dakota. Approved on Wednesday, it bans doctors from prescribing puberty blockers for anyone under 16, as well as outlawing sex reassignment surgery.

Read full article here...

Additional source:

<https://www.vox.com/identities/2020/1/29/21083505/transgender-kids-legislation-puberty-blockers>

Canada: Blowback Against Prime Minister Trudeau's Proposal to Require News Websites to Obtain Government Licenses

Canadian Heritage Minister Steven Guilbeault said that he planned to follow a panel report recommending that Canada's broadcasting laws for radio and television should require government licenses for all media content including online media, news sites, and social-media companies. After an uproar on the internet, both Trudeau and his minister began to waffle on their statements, but Trudeau remained firm that news sources must be “credible” and “trustworthy”. [Who will decide what is “credible and trustworthy? Trudeau and his comrades, of course.] -GEG

It's one of the fastest reversals of government policy that I've ever seen.

On Sunday, the Trudeau Liberals were promising to bring in a licensing regime for news outlets and podcasters, by Monday they were singing the praises of a free press.

It all started last week when a panel struck by Justin Trudeau himself to examine the future of media in Canada released their final report.

Called “Canada's Communications Future: A Time to Act,” the report called for new media to be required to register with the government and be licensed. On Sunday, Trudeau's culture minister told CTV's Question Period that he agreed with that idea.

“Mr. Speaker, on this side of the House we believe in a strong, free and independent press,” Trudeau said when questioned by Conservative Leader Andrew Scheer.

Well, let's be honest, a “strong, free and independent press,” isn't one that has to register with the government and obtain a licence. To do that would be to give the government control over what media outlets could say, print or broadcast.

That's bad for democracy and a complete violation of the ideal of freedom of speech.

Thankfully, Trudeau went a step further in saying he will not go forward with this idea.

“I want to be unequivocal, we will not impose licensing requirements on news organizations, nor will we regulate news content,” Trudeau said.

The only troubling part of Trudeau’s response is that he said his government’s priority is to ensure that Canadians have access to, “diverse, high-quality and credible news.” Who decides what is “high-quality” or “credible” when it comes to news?

I hope it’s not Justin Trudeau or any other politician. Politicians are the biggest purveyors of “fake news.” They’re the people who try to spin everything.

It was just about one year ago, Feb. 7, 2019, that I stood in a commuter parking lot north of Toronto as Trudeau reacted to the first story on SNC-Lavalin and lied to the world.

“The allegations in the Globe story are false,” Trudeau said.

Of course, we would come to learn that the allegations were true and then some. Yet, for weeks, the government’s line was that the media outlet was lying.

If we lived in a licensed system, would the Globe see their licence revoked for publishing something the government claimed was a lie? Would they have even published it in the first place or held back out of fear of irritating the authorities?

And make no mistake, the report tabled last week called for registration and licensing of media outlets more than once.

In recommendation 56, the report calls for online media to be registered by the CRTC, meaning any news outlet, any podcaster, any content creator – a recipe blog – could be registered by the government.

“This would require a person carrying on a media content undertaking by means of the Internet to register unless otherwise exempt,” the report states.

And at recommendation 74, the report called for the CRTC to be given the power to, “impose codes of conduct, including provisions with respect to resolution mechanisms, transparency, privacy, and accessibility regarding all media content undertakings.”

Read full article here...