

“Have You Accidentally Killed Someone Today?” Oregon Shames People Into Staying Home

written by GEG | April 20, 2020

DON'T ACCIDENTALLY KILL SOMEONE.

Oregon's Public Service Announcements are using shame to make people stay at home by making them think that, if they do not do so, they may kill an innocent person. The campaign slogan is "Don't accidentally kill someone. Stay home." Propaganda doesn't get any more obvious than that. -GEG

Oregon public service announcements are shaming people into staying home so they don't kill people amid the Coronavirus outbreak.

The "Stay Home, Save Lives" campaign is a public-private partnership to communicate to Oregonians about how they can do their part to contain the spread of COVID-19. according to the government website.

If you want to get back to work so you can feed your family and keep a roof over your head, then you are a murderer.

Read full article here...