

France: Social Distancing 'Dog Collars' Deployed for Factory Workers

written by GEG | January 19, 2021

A social distancing device emits a loud sound if people are too close to each other. China is already linking coronavirus rules to its onerous social credit score system, so the idea that people could be publicly shamed or punished for getting too close to others is a very real possibility.