

Woman with Violent Convulsions Warns Others Not to Get Moderna Experimental COVID Vaccine

Indiana: Shawn Skelton, a woman from Oakland City, Indiana, posted a video message on Facebook warning others to not get the Moderna experimental COVID vaccine after suffering whole body convulsions and tongue convulsions. According to a GoFundMe page, Skelton took the Moderna RNA vaccine on Monday, January 4, 2021, at the request of her employer at a nursing home. The post says that she had flu-like symptoms the next day, but still went to work. By Wednesday, she had uncontrollable tongue spasms, and on Thursday, she was taken to the hospital by ambulance. She was told that she was having a panic attack. The report states that she has “been given help from a doctor but it is private pay.”

Skelton was reportedly seen at a hospital, but said that an MRI, CT scan and blood cultures failed to produce anything. Skelton said Monday, one week after the vaccination, that the shaking and spasms she suffered days after taking the vaccine could only be a reaction to the shot.

The CDC, when contacted by the Courier-Press, weighed in on Skelton’s claims – not by casting doubt on them, but by endorsing vaccination for COVID-19 and saying side effects

“tend to be mild to moderate and go away quickly.”

First video shows convulsion while in the hospital:

<https://www.bitchute.com/video/Pa1TTtBJoB8e/>

Shawn received threats and angry messages on social media from pro-vaccine people who think she is faking this, so she posted a second video linked below.

Second video where demonstrates the convulsions while sitting and walking: Bitchute video link:

<https://www.bitchute.com/video/kIeJo0ti5JDn/>

GoFundMe post by Carissa Thomas:

“Help Shawn fight for answers!

This is my Bestest Friend in the whole world. She may as well be my Sister. This beautiful soul has been there for people in our cozy community more than I can count & now it's our turn to return the favor if you're able!! Shawn Skelton, she is a mother of 4 and works full time in LTC as she has for the past 25 years. As COVID has hit so many close to heart she agreed to get the Vaccine, being as she works closely in healthcare. On Monday 1/4/21 Shawn was given the Moderna . She continued to work Tuesday as she only had mild flu like symptoms. By Tuesday night her body hurt so bad she could barely move and this went on through Wednesday! On Wednesday her tongue began to spasm out of control by Thursday her body was in full convulsions! She went to the hospital via ambulance to be told it was clearly a panic attack. The 2nd hospital said it was a reaction of the vaccine and continue with Benadryl and writing a script for such. Friday the body movements continue non stop uncontrollable. They visit another hospital Friday morning and they give her a Xanax and send her home! Now they drive to Tennessee and visit 2 hospitals with still zero answers! No medical doctor will say anything more than this must be stress related! My friend is very upbeat and a happy person! She is empathetic to everyone and you would never forget her smile if she walked into a room! She is a CNA and she loves her patients as much as they love her! Please help Shawn get back to a normal life! We have been given hope from a doctor but it is private pay. With Shawn now being out of work and her fiancé having to take time off to care for her she is terrified of getting into a financial bind! Please help us to help her be able to get these answers she deserves! My Best friend is the most selfless person I know!"

From the Courier Press:

Shawn Skelton, the Oakland City woman who went viral with Facebook claims that a COVID-19 vaccine caused her uncontrollable shaking and tongue spasms, is home from the hospital.

Saying she was discharged from Deaconess Orthopedic Neuroscience Hospital with body shaking that doesn't stop and still no answers, Skelton said Tuesday she doesn't know what lies ahead. She said an MRI, CT scan and blood cultures failed to produce anything.

"I have no hope so far," she said. "I'm praying a lot."

Doctors at the neuroscience hospital at Deaconess Gateway told Skelton her problem is likely stress-related, said her fiance, Rich Vidiella.

"They want her to just live a healthier life, and that hopefully this goes away," Vidiella said. "(They said) if you deal with stress long enough in your life and you don't figure out how to relieve it, your body will figure out the shortest way for it to come out – and if it's either a stroke or a heart attack in your life, or this."

Vidiella said he and Skelton will talk to "other health professionals that have reached out" in search of other opinions.

Skelton got responses from all over the world with Facebook posts and videos illustrating her condition and placing the blame squarely on the Moderna vaccine. The original post has drawn 55,000 comments. It had been shared 187,000 times as of 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Skelton said Monday while still at Gateway that the shaking and spasms she suffered days after taking the vaccine could only be a reaction to the shot. She works at Good Samaritan Home, a nursing home in Evansville. She said she got the vaccine at the nursing home's request.

Health Impact News report includes video of tongue spasms.