

Merrick Garland Says Antifa Attacks on Courthouses Aren't Domestic Terrorism Because They Happen at Night

During the Senate confirmation of Biden-regime Attorney General nominee Merrick Garland, the US circuit judge indicated that he believes the protests against the 2020 elections are domestic terrorism but Antifa and Black Lives Matter attacks on federal courthouses are not domestic terrorism, because, in his words, the latter attacks “happened at night.” Garland said that his personal definition of domestic terrorism is the use of violence or threats of violence to interrupt the democratic process, therefore, attacks on buildings at night don't count. -GEG

UPDATE: Republican Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell stated that he fully intends to support the nomination of President Joe Biden's Attorney General nominee Merrick Garland, despite Garland's unconstitutional views on the Second Amendment, support for anti-white bigotry, and politically biased classification of “domestic terrorism.”

When questioned by Senator Josh Hawley about if he considers Antifa and Black Lives Matter attacks on the courthouse in Portland to be “domestic terrorism,” Joe Biden’s Attorney General nominee Merrick Garland said he might not, because those attacks happened at night.

Garland said that his personal definition of domestic terrorism is the use of violence or threats of violence to interrupt the democratic process, therefore, attacks on buildings at night probably don’t count.

Of course, the goal of the attacks is likely to stop the function of the people working in the buildings during the day – but that doesn’t seem to have crossed the potential Attorney General’s mind.

“So, an attack on a courthouse while in operation – trying to prevent judges from actually deciding cases, that plainly is domestic extremism, uh uh um um uh uh, doestic terrorism. An attack simply on a government property at night, or under any other kind of circumstances, is a clear crime and a serious one, and should be punished,” he stumbled through saying before claiming he doesn’t know “enough facts” about what Hawley was talking about.

“That’s where I draw the line. One is, uh, both are criminal, um uh uh, but one is a core attack on our democratic institutions,” he continued.

Read full article here...

Additional source:

<https://nationalfile.com/video-merrick-garland-says-antifa-attacks-on-courthouses-arent-domestic-terrorism-because-they-happen-at-night/>