

Pfizer Is Largest Donor to Doctors Group that Demands Masks for all Kids Over 2

written by GEG | July 20, 2021

The American Academy of Pediatrics is demanding that all children over the age of 2 wear face masks at schools and nurseries, even if they have been vaccinated. The demand goes further than that of the CDC, which has said that children and adults who work in schools who are fully vaccinated do not need to wear masks. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics website, Pfizer is their largest donor. Coincidence? –GEG

Update (1010ET): In case you wondered why The American Academy of Pediatricians would over-rule the CDC's "science", consider this...

Probably nothing, right?

As Summit News' Steve Watson detailed earlier,

The American Academy of Pediatrics is demanding that all children over the age of 2 years old wear face masks at schools and nurseries, a suggestion that goes further than any previous restrictions.

The group, which has 67,000 members in primary care, announced that even if kids have been vaccinated they should still be forced to wear masks, suggesting that “Combining layers of protection that include vaccinations, masking and clean-hands hygiene will make in-person learning safe and possible for everyone.”

The group also claims that “masking is proven to reduce transmission of the virus and to protect those who are not vaccinated.”

The group’s statement explains that universal masking is “the most effective strategy to create consistent messages and expectations among students without the added burden of needing to monitor everyone’s vaccination status.”
