

California Governor Newsom Vowed in 2008 to End Homelessness in 10 Years, But It Has Gotten Worse!

written by GEG | September 28, 2022

California: Democrat Governor Newsom, who was the Mayor of San Francisco from 2004 to 2011, appeared in a video dating back to 2008 in which he stated that he had a 10-year plan to build more homes to end chronic homelessness in his city. However, homelessness has exploded across the entire state due to government funding of bureaucracies that profit from homelessness and other bad policies.

California has a homelessness problem that is serious enough to make many impoverished Third-World countries blush.

This is far from a new problem, even though the scale of the situation has only increased in recent years.

Gov. Gavin Newsom even appeared in a video touting his plan for solutions to the state's biggest black eye – 14 years ago.

Gavin Newsom vows to end homelessness in San Fransisco in 10 year...in 2008
pic.twitter.com/m9b5k0pH07

– Kevin Dalton (@KevinForBOS) September 22, 2022

The progressive corporatist was the mayor of San Francisco at the time.

In the video, Newsom outlined his solutions to the city's problem with homelessness, pledging to build more housing. Housing shortages are continually cited as key to the unaffordable state's homelessness crisis to this day.

In spite of an entire set of ever-growing local, state and federal programs, California's homeless problem has only gotten discernibly worse, even as Newsom has ascended to higher office and continually been re-elected.

The United States Interagency Council on Homelessness has tallied a steadily increasing homeless population in the state since 2010.

Read full article here...