

US Buying $290M Worth of Anti-Radiation Drugs for Use in 'Nuclear Emergency'

written by GEG | October 7, 2022

The Biden regime is buying up $290 million in anti-radiation drugs for use in “nuclear emergencies” amid escalating tensions with Russia and heightened threats of a nuclear war. The US Department of Health and Human Services is purchasing a supply of the drug Nplate that is approved to treat blood cell injuries that accompany acute radiation syndrome (ARS) when the body is exposed to a high dose of penetrating radiation, reaching internal organs in a matter of seconds. Nplate stimulates the body’s production of platelets in order to reduce radiation-induced bleeding, Despite Russia’s numerous warnings to the US that it will use nuclear weapons to defend their territory and are “not bluffing,” the US has been shipping billions in high-tech weaponry to Ukraine to attack Russian forces.