

EU Has Poured $364 Million into Libya, Lining the Pockets of Warlords and Criminal Gangs

A new review of EU money being spent in Libya to curb the flow of migrants has shown that the money is actually lining the pockets of warlords and people-smuggling networks to facilitate illegal migration. So far, the political bloc has spent $364 million euros, with another $45 million earmarked in the future. Some of the money has gone through United Nations officials, yet internal emails show that corrupt UN officials knew some of the cash had been funneled to criminals. The EU has spent millions training the Libyan coast guard and the Italian government handed ten boats for Libyan coast guard patrol activities.

A new review of European Union (EU) money being spent in Libya to help curb the flow of migrants has shown that the money is actually lining the pockets of warlords and people-smuggling networks.

The EU has spent millions of euros in recent years in order to stop the large-scale flow of illegal migrants from Libya. But according to a review of where the funds have ended up, much of the money has gone towards the very groups helping to facilitate illegal migration, Sverige Radio reports.

So far, the political bloc has spent 327.9 million euros, with another 41 million earmarked in the future. While some of the money has gone through United Nations officials, internal emails revealed by the Associated Press (AP) show that the officials knew some of the cash had been funnelled to criminals.

AP also noted the cooperation between the Libyan coast guard and militias stating that the militias “torture, extort and otherwise abuse migrants for ransoms in detention centres under the nose of the U.N., often in compounds that receive millions in European money”.

The revelations are a blow to the EU, which has spent millions on training the Libyan coastguard along with the Italian government which handed the Libyans ten boats to use for coast guard patrol activities.

UK: Boris Johnson Named New Prime Minister, Grapples with Leaving the EU, But Says He

Won't Cooperate with Popular Brexit Party

Three years after the passage of the Brexit referendum to leave the EU, the will of the people has yet to be realized. Boris Johnson is the new Prime Minister, and people are skeptical. Nigel Farage, the leader of the newly-formed Brexit Party, says that Britain's new prime minister, Boris Johnson, must either leave the EU or face massive unpopularity in a future election.

Brexit Party leader Nigel Farage has said he is open to an electoral pact with Boris Johnson, so long as the incoming PM upholds his leadership election commitment to leaving the European Union by October 31.

Writing in the Daily Telegraph, Farage declared that a general election is required to deliver Brexit and get any deal through the Commons, predicting that a Brexit-Tory alliance would "smash" the Labour party.

He is going to have to risk his longed-for position as PM to ensure Brexit is enacted properly.

There is no prospect of a meaningful Brexit thanks to the views of most sitting MPs. And any attempt to prorogue Parliament will lead to the PM being brought down by his own side.

*The inescapable truth, therefore, is that he must hold an autumn
general election. That is his only way out .. [and] for this strategy to work, he will need the support of the Brexit Party.*

*If he is able to convince us, then together we would electorally
smash the Labour Party, he would assume a big working majority, and he would go down as one of the great leaders in British history.*

However, Johnson has ruled out a deal with the Brexit party and has said he does not want an early election.

Nigel Farage and Brexit Party Has Big Win in EU Elections

UK: Nigel Farage formed the Brexit Party six weeks ago, because the government has refused to honor the 2016 referendum to leave the European Union. Farage's Party smashed the labor and conservative parties in the recent EU elections because they, like the government itself, refuse to accept the will of the people. -GEG

UK Prime Minister Theresa May Announces Resignation After 3-Year Brexit Failure

Mrs. May said that she would be resigning as leader of the Conservative Party on June 7th, so that a successor could be chosen. However, May revealed she would also be staying on as Prime Minister until her replacement is selected, which could take weeks or months, depending on how the election runs. Nigel Farage's Brexit party is predicted to win a majority according to this report.

Prime Minister Theresa May announced her resignation from outside 10 Downing Street Friday morning, stating she would be officially stepping ## down in two weeks time.

In her remarks outside the Prime Minister's official residence,

Theresa May said she had "done her best", and "everything I can" to deliver Brexit by negotiating a deal with the European Union, but conceded "sadly I was not able to do so".

Saying it was time for a new Prime Minister to lead Brexit, Mrs May said she would be resigning as leader of the Conservative Party on Friday 7th of June, so that a successor could be chosen.

In doing so, the Prime Minister fires the starting gun on a leadership race that has already been run behind closed doors for weeks.

The details of her departure mean Mrs May could remain party leader, and hence Prime Minister, for weeks if not months more.

While she will officially relinquish the title of Conservative party leader in 14 days, May revealed she would also be staying on Prime Minister until her replacement is selected, which depending on how the election runs. When Mrs May became leader following the resignation of David Cameron in the wake of the 2016 EU referendum, she was selected within days as other candidates dropped out to give her a clear run.

In the case of David Cameron's own ascension to the leadership, it took five and a half months between it being announced, and the final selection.

UK: Nigel Farage Gives Update

on Trump Dropping Bomb on Watered-Down Brexit Plan

Nigel Farage, former head of the pro-Brexit UK Independent Party, said that Trump dropped a bombshell by criticizing UK Prime Minister Theresa May's soft Brexit plan, stating that "this was not the Brexit that the people voted for." Theresa May's plan would make the UK subject to European court, lack of control over their own borders and it would make a trade deal between the UK and US virtually impossible. May faces being removed from office.

DONALD Trump today accuses the PM of wrecking Brexit – and warns she may have killed off any chance of a vital US trade deal.

The US President delivers his incendiary verdict on her negotiating strategy in a world exclusive interview with The Sun.

In a world exclusive interview with The Sun, Donald Trump said Theresa May had ignored his advice by opting for a soft Brexit strategy

In an extraordinary intervention timed to coincide with his UK visit, Mr Trump said Theresa May ignored his advice by opting for a soft Brexit strategy.

And he warned her any attempts to maintain close ties with the EU would make a lucrative US trade deal very unlikely.

Mr Trump said: "If they do a deal like that, we would be dealing with the European Union instead of dealing with the UK, so it will probably kill the deal."

Donald Trump said Theresa May's new soft Brexit blueprint would 'kill' any future trade deal with the United States. His comments, damaging to the Prime Minister, come as he delivers his most brutally honest verdict yet on Britain in which he also:

- Accused EU leaders of destroying its culture and identity by allowing in millions of migrants
- Tore into London Mayor Sadiq Khan for not standing up to terrorists
- Blamed Khan for spiralling crime in the capital
- Insisted former Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson would make "a great Prime Minister"
- Denied once branding Theresa May a "bossy schoolteacher"
- Maintained he would keep ties with Russian tyrant Vladimir Putin despite the Salisbury Novichok poisonings
- Demanded Britain and other Nato countries spend more on defence
- Spoke of his sadness at feeling unwelcome in the capital by anti-Trump protesters
- Claimed millions of Brits backed his policies
- Told of his pride at taking wife Melania to meet the Queen

Mr Trump's remarks come as he prepares to meet the PM for a working lunch at Chequers.

He will then board a helicopter for Windsor Castle to meet the Queen before flying up to Scotland for a private two-day visit.

Thousands of people are expected to take part in a series of protests during his stay in the UK.

I told May how to do Brexit but she didn't listen to me

Donald Trump with The Sun's Political Editor Tom Newton Dunn. The Sun was the only British media outlet Trump spoke to before his arrival in the UK for his first visit as President. THERESA May's new soft Brexit blueprint would "kill" any future trade deal with the United States, Donald Trump warns today.

Mounting an extraordinary attack on the PM's exit negotiation, the President also reveals she has ignored his advice on how to toughen up the troubled talks.

Instead he believes Mrs May has gone "the opposite way", and he thinks the results have been "very unfortunate".

His fiercest criticism came over the centrepiece of the PM's new Brexit plan – which was unveiled in full yesterday.

It would stick to a common rulebook with Brussels on goods and agricultural produce in a bid to keep customs borders open with the EU.

But Mr Trump told The Sun: "If they do a deal like that, we would be dealing with the European Union instead of dealing with the UK, so it will probably kill the deal."

Brexit Betrayed by UK Government of Globalists

UK Prime Minister Theresa May's government has betrayed the Brexit-voting British public by stalling any changes until 2022. Under the false banner of 'transition' the globalists agreed to obey all EU laws and keep the borders open to all EU immigrants, granting them full right – forever. [It's as though the Brexit vote never happened. The globalists are confident that, by 2022, everything will be so chaotic that the nation will have no choice but to beg to be re-admitted to the EU, supposedly as the only solution to their woes. Now it's up to the Brits to fight back. We shall see.] -GEG

The United Kingdom will agree to follow all European Union rules after Brexit and keep the nation's borders open for the duration of the transition period to 2022, with further bad news for fisheries and communities in Northern Ireland as a new agreement was reached in Brussels Monday.

The European Union's chief Brexit negotiator Michel Barnier made the announcement in a joint press conference with Britain's David Davis in Brussels, where the pair presented what was introduced as a "legal text which constitutes a decisive step" towards a final agreement. Revealing the enormous extent to which Theresa May's government has sold out the Brexit-voting British public, Barnier and Davis spoke on a number of key policy areas including immigration, British control over British laws, and regaining control over British fishing waters.

Speaking first at the meeting with journalists, French politician Barnier said Britain had agreed to continue following all Brussels laws for years after the official Brexit date of March 2019 under the guise of a transition period, but would not be able to challenge or make decisions on that law itself.

Sugar-coating the fact that Britain won't be free from the yoke of EU legislation for years to come, Barnier said: "the United Kingdom will no longer participate in EU decision-making processes because after the 30th of March 2019 you will no longer be a member state."

"Nonetheless, it will preserve all the benefits and advantages of the single market, the customs union, and European policies and will, therefore, be required to respect all European rules just like member states do."

Barnier also made clear that Britain wouldn't have any control over immigration during the transition period either, with all European Union citizens coming to the United Kingdom through the period into the 2020's would have full rights forever, under what he called a "new resident status", saying this would give those citizens "legal certainty."

Yet the whole deal will stand or fall on answering the question over the European Union-British border between Republic of Ireland and Ulster, which has been inflated to a matter of utmost importance – and particularly by those who would see Britain remain locked into the European Union. Just days after British Brexit leader Jacob Rees-Mogg warned the EU was using Ulster to keep the UK in the single market, Barnier euphemistically referred to the "backstop solution" to Ireland – keeping Britain’s westernmost region in the customs union.

90% of Catalonia Voters Want Independence from Spain; Spanish Government Responds With Police Violence

Catalonia: 90% of voters said “yes” to independence from Spain, but the Spanish government used police to prevent hundreds of thousands from voting, to confiscate completed ballots, and to beat protestors. Spain’s Prime Minister announced that “no referendum” took place, claiming that the majority of Catalans did not participate in the vote after Madrid declared it was illegal.

Catalonia: 90% of voters said “yes” to independence from Spain. Catalonia has 5.34 million voters; the Catalan government reported that out of the 2,262,424 ballots that were not seized, 2,020,144 were YES votes, 176,566 were NO votes, 45,586 were blank, and 20,129 were null votes. The Spanish government’s massive police crackdown “prevented” an estimated 770,000 people from voting. So far, 844 people have reported injuries from police brutality during the vote, and 74 have already filed official complaints. Spain's Prime Minister announced that "no referendum" took place in the country, claiming the majority of Catalans "obeyed the law" and did not want to participate in the independence vote after Madrid branded it illegal.

France: Emmanuel Macron Won French Election, and Marine Le Pen Conceded

Emmanuel Macron won 65% of the vote and will become France's youngest leader since Napoleon Bonaparte. Far-right critic of the EU and immigration, Marine Le Pen vowed to create a strong opposition force and called on patriots to support her. –GEG

Emmanuel Macron won France's presidential election Sunday after his opponent Marine Le Pen conceded shortly after polls closed at 8 pm.

Le Pen called Macron to concede the election after the centrist candidate was projected to have won approximately 65 percent of the vote in the country's run-off election. Reports showed a low voter turn out for an election that was considered to be a determining factor in France's future in Europe.

"A new chapter in our long history begins tonight. I want it to be one of hope and renewed confidence," said Macron after his victory.

Le Pen noted that French citizens voted for "continuity." She promised to create a "number one opposition force" to counter globalization in France, calling upon "all patriots to join" her new movement.

The 39-year-old Macron is France's youngest leader since Napoleon Bonaparte and comes into office as a relative unknown with limited political experience as a former economic minister.

Le Pen, a known skeptic of the European Union, has long advocated for a "France-first" policy, specifically regarding immigration and economics. She warned in March that the EU "will die" and promised a referendum on France's membership in the union.

EU Officials Threaten to Force EU To Accept Even More Muslim Immigrants

Greece's commissioner for the EU on immigration, has boasted that the EU bloc has the "tools, the means, and the power" to force EU member states to accept Islamic migrants. He said this during a visit to Poland, which currently refuses to accept economic migrants. The Commission, consisting of unelected 'administrators', has threatened to fine member states $270,000 for every migrant they refuse. -GEG

The European Union's immigration commissioner says the bloc has the "tools, the means, and the power" to force EU member states to accept Islamic migrants.

Dimitris Avramopoulos, Greece's commissioner for the EU's "Common Immigration and Asylum Policy," made the comments during a visit to Poland, which refuses to accept economic migrants into their country.

"If we don't have tangible efforts by September... the Commission will not hesitate to make use of its power," he warned.

Avramopoulos' comments are the latest of a string of threats made by European officials to countries who challenge the EU's migrant quotas meant to offset the 160,000 migrants from Italy and Greece by September.

"The Commission might start infraction procedures and we will certainly consider that," said European Commission Vice-President Frans Timmermans last month, adding that "peer pressure" would eventually convince countries to adopt the policy.

The Commission, the unelected executive arm of the EU, has even threatened to fine member states €250,000 for every migrant they refuse to settle in order to “fairly and equally” distribute thousands of migrants across the continent.

The EU’s foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini announced last month that the bloc had no intention of sealing the borders to reduce the flow of migrants.

“Let me be totally clear from the very beginning: Europe does not and will not close its doors,” she said.

“I believe Europeans should understand that we need migration for our economies and our welfare systems, with the current demographic trend we have to be sustainable.”
