

Stats Show That Migrants Do Not Assimilate Within European Countries But Create Separatist Ghettos

A Norwegian study shows that the longer economic migrants spend in their host countries, the more likely they are to drop out of jobs and become dependent on welfare. Encouraging multiculturalism results in migrants choosing to isolate, which leads to the creation of ghettos and conflict with others. Muslim migrants do not view Islam as compatible with Western laws, values, and morals and seek to be separate from European culture. They want a country within a country. -GEG