

Judicial Watch Estimates 900,000 Aliens Illegally Voted in 2018 Midterm Elections

Tom Fitton, President of Judicial Watch, estimates that at least 900,000 aliens illegally voted in the 2018 midterms. He tweeted that new data from Texas and Pennsylvania indicate that foreigners are illegally voting in massive numbers. Voter ID laws help prevent voter fraud, but those who benefit from massive migration say that this is racism. -GEG

The Left, which wants to be able to steal elections, pretends voting fraud doesn't exist. Judicial Watch knows better:

*MASSIVE VOTER FRAUD? I estimate at least 900,000 aliens illegally voted in midterms. New numbers out of Texas and Pennsylvania suggest foreign nationals illegally voting in massive numbers! Voter id AND citizenship verification needed!

Voter Fraud: Tiny Precinct in Georgia Has 276 Registered Voters, But 670 Ballots Were Cast!

Habersham County's Mud Creek precinct in northeastern Georgia had 276 registered voters ahead of the state's primary elections in May. But 670 ballots were cast, according to the Georgia secretary of state's office, indicating a 243% turnout. Georgia is one of four states that uses voting machines statewide that produce no paper record for voters to verify, making them difficult to audit, experts say. There is a dire need to reform the voting system.

Hackers at Cybersecurity Conference Changed Output of 30 Voting Machines within 2 Hours

Professional hackers were invited to break into dozens of voting machines at this year's annual DEFCON cybersecurity conference. They successfully hacked every one of the 30 machines within two hours. A professor of computer science at the University of Copenhagen in Denmark, was able, not merely to discover all the votes cast on the machines, but to manipulate the results. Even paper ballots are at risk if they are counted by machines. Hackers at a cybersecurity conference breached 30 voting machines in less than two hours.

The episode demonstrates the US' continued vulnerability to electoral tampering by state actors.

Some believe that going back to paper ballots is the only way to guard against future cyberattacks from Russia or other foreign powers.

Professional hackers were invited to break into dozens of voting machines and election software at this year's annual DEFCON cybersecurity conference. And they successfully hacked every single one of the 30 machines acquired by the conference.

The challenge was held at DEF CON's "Voting Village," where hackers took turns breaching ten sample voting machines and voter registration systems, Politico reported.

Carten Schurman, a professor of computer science at the University of Copenhagen in Denmark, was able to break into one voting machine in minutes.

"I could have done this in 2004, or 2008, or 2012," Schurman told Politico. With access to the voting machine, Schurman had the the power not only to see all the votes cast on the machine, but also to manipulate the results.

DEF CON's hacking exercise came as the US grapples with the fallout from Russia's interference in the 2016 election, which included attempts to tamper with voting systems.

Bloomberg reported in June that election systems in as many as 39 states could have been attacked by Russian state actors, though voting tallies are not believed to have been altered or manipulated in any way.

"In Illinois, investigators found evidence that cyber intruders tried to delete or alter voter data," Bloomberg said. "The hackers accessed software designed to be used by poll workers on Election Day, and in at least one state accessed a campaign finance database."

President Trump Signed an Executive Order to Investigate Voter Fraud

President Trump's latest executive order will form a bipartisan commission to review potential voter fraud. He said that the commission will be looking at evidence of voting by illegal aliens and those claiming to be someone who is deceased. The biggest potential for vote fraud is the ability to program vote-counting machines but, so far, this has not been mentioned as a point of inquiry. -GEG

President Trump's executive order titled "Presidential Commission on Election Integrity" is aimed at forming a bipartisan commission to review potential voter fraud and "suppression".

The commission would be chaired by Vice President, Mike Pence.

Deputy Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee-Sanders spoke on the executive order in today's press briefing:

The commission will also include individuals with knowledge and experience in election management and voter integrity . . . The commission will review policies and practices that enhance or undermine confidence in elections and identify system vulnerabilities.
